CARMEL HIGH STUDENTS EARN WHILE THEY LEARN
Students who enroll in the Regional Occupation Program at Carmel High School learn a vocation while they earn school credit. They also receive wages in some of the courses. See page 21.

LOW-LEVEL CONTAMINATION OF CV GROUNDWATER DISCOVERED
Low-level contamination of groundwater in Carmel Valley has been discovered by the state Department of Water Resources. The contamination has been linked to septic tank discharge. See page 12.

STORKIE IS DEAD
Storkie, "The Lion of the Golden Bough Courtyard," is dead. The young male cat was doused with gasoline Sunday afternoon and had to be put to sleep several hours later. See page 6.

SHE'S 'HAD IT' WITH TREES
Donna Chenoweth has "had it" with trees. She said she's been harried by the city about her trees to the point where seeing a Monterey pine tempts her to cuss like a lumberjack. See page 10.

CARMEL CRAFT STUDIOS WON'T CLOSE
Nearly all the tenants in the Carmel Craft Studios will be able to remain at the San Carlos and Ocean Avenue complex. The owners of each shop will have individual leases with the landlord. See page 19.

CARMEL RESIDENTS GET EARLY JUMP ON 1980 CENSUS
Carmel residents will get an early jump on the 1980 Census. The census questionnaire will be hand delivered to each residence instead of mailed because of the unique mailing system in the city of Carmel. See page 9.

CITY PLANNERS PROPOSE LAW TO CONTROL SHORT-TERM RENTALS
The Carmel Planning Commission has recommended to the City Council an ordinance that would control short-term rentals of residential properties. See page 5.

CARMEL SCHOOLS TO DROP NATIONAL TEST PROGRAM

POLICE EMPHASIZE FUEL EFFICIENCY FOR NEW PATROL CARS
Four new police cars are patrolling Carmel streets. According to Police Chief William Ellis the new cars are more maneuverable and should be more economical to operate. See page 4.

DEBATE CONTINUES ON WHO WILL OPERATE RIPPLING RIVER
Legal and practical obstacles may prevent the county Housing Authority and a private, blue-ribbon committee from reaching an agreement to revive Rippling River, the "hotel for the handicapped" in Carmel Valley. The Tri-County Steering Committee submitted a "work agreement" proposal in February to the Monterey County Housing Authority, owner and operator of the 150-unit residential complex. It is expected to be rejected on a number of legal grounds. See page 17.

DISPOSAL COMPANY OFFERS FREE NEWSPAPER PICKUP

NO KNOWN CURE FOR POISON OAK RASH
Poison oak rash is so common that "a day doesn't go by that I don't see two or three cases of it," says Dr. Paul Tocchet of Carmel Valley. Treatment varies according to the severity of the allergic reaction to the poison oak's volatile oil. For most cases, Tocchet recommends over-the-counter lotions that have a cooling, drying action on the skin. See page 15.

'The wrong target'

Dear Editor:

I am appalled at the unjust defamation of character the Pine Cone has dealt one of the most beloved members of our community, Dr. Toland Doud.

I refer to the articles in the March 20 issue by Keith Yates, "Carmel Craft Studios may be next victim of rent hikes." To Mr. Yates, it probably sounded like a hot story — one that seemed congruous with several other rent hike situations that have become evident in recent months. But he jumped too quickly. The Carmel Craft Studios situation, ridiculously misrepresented in Mr. Yates' article, is actually more of a reversal of that trend than an example of it.

The Carmel Craft Studios is not a threatened institution, but a dying one that Dr. Doud is seeking to revive. The only thing being threatened is Mr. Klepich's monetary reign over the individual craft shops. It is unfortunate that, in attempting to spare Mr. Klepich the humiliation of being publicly exposed for his actions, Dr. Doud has been villainized. Now Mr. Klepich has left himself no choice — the real rent collector (Klepich) must stand up.

By now, I am sure that Mr. Yates has stumbled upon the truth of the matter, and is busily changing his story for the upcoming issue. But it cannot erase the moral humiliation and emotional turmoil Dr. Doud has undoubtedly suffered.

It is sadly ironical that the kindest and fairest of men should become the wrong target of an overzealous journalist.

Mr. Yates, how about a public apology to Dr. Doud? A good person is more valuable than a "good" story.

Students' plight

Dear Editor:

As a student of Carmel High School, I would like to comment on the article "Is Carmel High School going downhill?" that appeared in last week's Pine Cone.

I would like to begin by discussing your comments on the sex questionnaire and teaching methods used by Richard Fletcher.

Sex education is essential in any class dealing with health, biology and human behavior. The technique of the questionnaire helps students "open up" and allows them to ask questions they would not ordinarily ask in a classroom. There is a great deal of pressure on the teenagers of today to have sex, and a lot of them believe that it is expected of them.

Mr. Fletcher does not give his students step-by-step instructions in sex, rather he opens them up to their own questions and helps them resolve some of the problems facing them. His efforts are successful because he helps kids to cope in today's world. Speaking as a former student, Mr. Fletcher's class is a success!

Your reporter implied that morale at Carmel High School was low and that our principal was not involved in school affairs.

The success of our girls' basketball team makes such assertions look a bit ridiculous. They were the only team in the entire Central Coast that was supported by both the school band and cheerleaders, not to mention the principal, who attended numerous other games during the season.

If there is a general lack of morale at Carmel High, it is caused by the cutbacks and atmosphere created by the passage of Proposition 13. It's not exactly easy to teach if one is worried about having a job, nor is it easy to learn in a school that has limited books and supplies and is in a state of physical collapse. Who's to blame for all of this? The parents and voters of Prop. 13!

Finally, I'd like to touch upon the "high proportion of dropouts and unprepared students" who leave Carmel High. Frankly, it shocked me that the eight parents who wrote the letters would place the blame on the administration and teachers.

Did these critics stop to consider the number of students at C.H.S. who come from broken homes? Almost all the students I know who have dropped out of school or have other school problems have come from broken or non-supportive homes. These students don't receive the moral support and encouragement provided in a home where there is a sound family structure.

Any student expected to succeed in high school should first have this support and encouragement.

"The ladies doth protest too much methinks," and the problem may well be their own.

Duffy Carolan

P.S. I'd like to get that photographer back here and show him some of the beauty C.H.S. has to offer. Cheap shot, Pine Cone; and hardly a good example for kids or adults. I'm sure there are a couple of ugly places around the Pine Cone office, too.

Brown supporter

Dear Editor:

I am writing to express my support for Mike Brown as mayor.

I feel he has shown great initiative in preserving the uniqueness of Carmel, while at the same time maintaining a balance of progressiveness.

He was instrumental in eliminating the unsightliness and "big city" image that a stream of tour buses into Carmel would have represented. He started the glass recycle program in Carmel and has been involved in numerous other projects. He is actively serving on the boards of AMBAG, the Monterey Peninsula Youth Project, the Monterey Peninsula Garbage and Refuse Site and the Solid Waste Advisory Board.

I am very impressed by his involvement in community projects and his willingness to speak with residents when they have a problem they feel could be solved through the action of the council.

He is the type of person who will help preserve this great place if elected mayor.

'Strong commitment'

Dear Editor:

I would like to endorse the candidacy of Larry Morago for the Carmel City Council.

As the principal of Carmel Woods School, I have worked closely with Mr. Morago. He has served as chairperson of the Carmel Woods School Site Council and the Committee to Study the Closing of Small Schools.

Mr. Morago is a diligent, conscientious person with a strong personal commitment to community service.

Forums helpful

Dear Editor:

Every Carmel voter should attend at least one of the remaining candidate forums! You may think you know for whom you will vote on April 8, but seeing and hearing the candidates in person may change your decision. It did change mine — radically!

At the March 20 meeting — for mayor: Would you vote for the consummate politician, energetically tooting his own horn and then being downright rude and dictatorial to a member of the audience who asked him a question?

Or would it be the young man — however well-intentioned — who dismisses the issues most Carmelites see as problems by saying they don't exist, they are just "phantoms"?

Or, how about the apparently preoccupied man whose answer to questions appeared to be, "If the person who asked that question will see me after the meeting, I'll be glad to discuss it." If he can't organize his thoughts now, what does that say about how he would run council meetings, and make decisions?

What does that leave us with? You have my enthusiastic vote, Barney Laiolo! The process of elimination may not be the best way to select a candidate, but at least in this case it leaves us with a good one.

The situation with the City Council candidates is more encouraging. We seem to have at least four strong candidates and our only problem may be ... which two?

See you at the meetings on March 27 and March 30!

A phony issue

By AL EISNER

THE HUE AND CRY over the fate of the Carmel Crafts Studios subsided quickly last weekend when the landlord and most of the tenants agreed to new lease terms (see story on page 19).

When all the facts were revealed, it became apparent that the outcry against the landlord, Dr. Toland Doud, was unjustified.

Fred Klepich, owner of Studio Art Supplies, leased the 8,000-square-foot property from Doud for $650 per month. He told the Pine Cone he collected "between $2,200 and $2,500 per month" from the other tenants who subleased from him. So, he was able to clear a profit of almost $2,000 per month.

In addition, he occupied 2,300 square feet for his art gallery and art supply business. At $1.50 per square foot, which is certainly a fair rate for prime San Carlos retail frontage, that would amount to $3,450 per month in rent—which he did not have to pay.

That means Klepich was able to make more than $5,000 per month profit in the form of value and actual rent collected. This sum was reduced somewhat, by charges for upkeep and repairs. He said this has cost "up to $1,000 per month," but, judging by the condition of the property, it is difficult to see how he could have spent that amount of money.

THE HONEST FOLKS who circulated petitions a couple of weeks ago, decrying the loss of another residential-type business must feel like a bunch of saps right now. And, the abuse suffered by Dr. Doud, who is a native of Carmel, was certainly uncalled for.

Now don't get me wrong . . . I don't see anything wrong with an honest man making an honest buck by making money on a very favorable lease. What irks me is the cynicism of some of the people involved in the campaign to "save" another part of Carmel. It was a phoney issue from the outset.

Carmel citizens were treated to another sideshow by the antics of some of the candidates for mayor, all claiming credit for their part in reaching a fair and equitable solution. The fact of the matter is that Doud made a fair offer which was readily accepted by the tenants.

It should be noted for the record that at least one of the tenants will be actually paying less rent to Doud than he was paying to Klepich as a sub-lessee.

LAST WEEK I commented on the trend toward unnecessary and dangerous secrecy in Carmel government. As an example of this, I cited the purchase of two houses on the corner of Dolores and Fifth, which was done in secret without the knowledge or participation of Carmel citizens.

We were led to believe that the lots would be used for additional parking for the post office.

Well, folks, that is not the case at all.

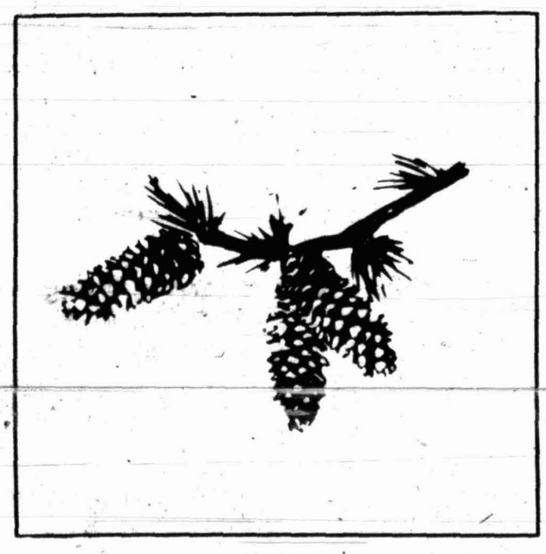

When I commented to City Administrator Doug Peterson that the city bought the property with in-lieu parking money because taxpayers were beginning to exert pressure to use it, instead of sitting on it, he explained: "Oh, no . . . we didn't buy those lots for parking. And, we didn't use in-lieu parking money for the purchase. It came out of the hostelry tax fund."

How many of you knew that? How many of you thought the lots were bought for parking? How many of you think it's a good idea? How many of you are curious to know what the city intends to do with the property?

The smug politicians now running our fair city will tell you — maybe — if and when they think we're old enough or mature enough to handle the information.

The rumor I heard was that the property was purchased so that it could be swapped for other parcels to help the library. The other rumor was that it would be used to provide low-income housing for older people in conjunction with the Carmel Foundation.

We have a reporter present at every meeting of the Carmel City Council. Not once did we hear that the city was thinking of using that property for anything except parking. Matter of fact, we didn't even hear that the city was interested in it for any reason. We heard about it after the property was purchased. The decision was made in secret. Behind closed doors.

What forum revealed

Dear Editor:

The candidates' night at Sunset on March 13, revealed several aspects of the Carmel mayoralty and council elections.

Mike Brown's delivery demonstrated a profound and searching understanding of the issues, consistent with his six years of serious service as councilman.

Questioning developed that the former mayor was considerably confused on recent approaches to city property acquisition. He represents the old, tired administration that gave us Carmel Plaza, and is not up to current challenges

The street-corner councilman who now brings bumper stickerism and campaign buttons to our Carmel, has also presented his "wish list." It is, substantially, the same weary recitation that he unveiled two years ago, and immediately repudiated by his actions. It is "pie-in-the-sky" that turns to applesauce.

It is, of course, essential that we return to what affects Carmel citizens. Mike Brown has worked long and hard on the many city problems, including traffic, tour buses and parking, notably as they concern the resident, and he shows the surest and most settled hand for mayor of Carmel.

Jim is a retired Navy captain with much executive experience to bring to the council, yet with a fresh and vigorous approach that ensures maximum use of it.

As a planning commissioner he has shown a keen insight into the problems that plague the city, a willingness to tackle them and the capacity to reach reasonable conclusions.

Elect Brown mayor and Wright councilman on April 8 to provide a young and competent administration that will serve the city best.

Hospital staff praised

Dear Editor:

On a recent visit to California, we spent a few days in the lovely Monterey area, staying in the delightful seaside town of Carmel.

Unfortunately, I became ill and was taken to Emergency, Community Hospital, Monterey.

Within seconds of admission, I was in a wheelchair, taken to a side ward, put on a heart monitoring machine, blood pressure and temperature taken and arrangements made for an EKG.

This letter is to express my appreciation and admiration for the immediate and marvelous attention I received from the several nurses and two doctors who attended me. Nowhere in the world could I have received more sympathy and understanding, and that includes my native country.

The date of this episode was February 21, 1980, around 4 p.m., and if you print this letter, the nurses and doctors referred to will recognize to whom my appreciation is directed . . . many, many thanks again to you all.

Who pays for lawsuit?

Dear Editor:

This letter is for all, but specifically directed to the citizens of the city of Carmel.

The city is presently engaged in a lawsuit paid with taxpayers' money against the county supervisors. It is to prohibit the supervisors from permitting the possible development of hotel-motel uses at the Rancho Canada Golf Course and on the Odello land on Highway 1. At what cost to the Carmel taxpayers?

The City Council feels it should exert its weight because they have a "sphere of influence." Is this their only reason? Or is it to protect the motel owners of Carmel from whom they pick up a huge yearly hostelry tax?

One excuse they give is that added hotels-motels will bring more people into their city. But isn't bringing more people into Carmel the "name of the game"? Or are they just protecting motel owners and not retail business owners?

But how far can the "sphere of influence" be given court time? Can citizens in the areas surrounding the city of Carmel get the supervisors to bring a lawsuit against the city because they don't like what that city is doing with its zoning?

The city has zoned itself out of providing its own corporation yard. It decided it looks better in some other citizen's front yard in the county supervisors' sphere. Where did the county demand an Environmental Impace Report?

The city has further down-zoned other properties to get rid of unsightly types of businesses — lumber companies, auto repairs. Shouldn't this city be forced to be more self-sufficient in its zoning, or should the county supervisors force them through a lawsuit?

Did Carmel bring a lawsuit against the businesses at the Barnyard? The masses of office buildings going up? Additional proposed development? Wouldn't a stop to this help their businesses?

If we are to avoid chaos and keep the courts clear for their proper businesses, not complaints of Carmel because it has failed to convince county planners and supervisors; counter complaints of county residents against Carmel; let's tell Carmel to save its money, mind its own business and use the hostelry taxes to improve its city for its taxpayers and its visitors. Let them not waste money on lawsuits to prove that there no longer is a "right to private property."

Subsidize taxis

Dear Editor:

How's this idea concerning local buses?

The city of Carmel testing a bus system will cost the town lots of money for insurance, drivers, repair, garaging and on and on.

Why don't we subsidize the Carmel Taxi Service? They can charge customers one-half, and the city one-half. Carmel Taxi Service would then be responsible for drivers, repairs, insurance, 24-hour service and even thoughtful door-to-door service.

What would this accomplish?

1. The taxi service will survive possible hard times to come.
2. The city will not have a large monetary investment.
3. A true evaluation of need over a two to three year trial period would be accomplished.
4. You would retain an old and honorable business of the village.

A rebuttal

Dear Editor:

To answer Mr. Martin's question published here in the March 20 issue, Mr. Brunn and his partner would be more than happy to rent their second story commercial space as housing to anyone who is interested.

Mind you, those lovely rooms do not include a bathroom or kitchen and would require renovation for use as living space. But if Mr. Martin likes the price (and Brunn does not believe in asking more than the current rate for downtown Carmel property) he is surely welcome to lease the space.

I am quite certain that at no time has Mr. Burnn or his partner stated that they would not lease the space for housing, as Martin claims.

Another letter writer, Mr. Warner, has accused Mr. Brunn of putting himself "above the law" regarding his use of bumper stickers and buttons.

Mr. Warner obviously prefers taking cheap shots to doing his homework. Brunn, in his usual careful, thorough way, researched city ordinances and checked with city staff before he even ordered the stickers.

The First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution protects a broad spectrum of religious and political rights, a breadth of freedoms not given to commercial advertising. Carmel's laws do not, indeed cannot, violate these rights by preventing use of political or religious signage or canvassing or speaking out for political or religious causes.

No one need have a sign permit to display Brunn stickers. While it is deplorable to place these stickers where they are unwelcome, Brunn foresaw possible problems and specifically chose a sticker that will come right off if removed within a few days.

The majority of stickers one sees around town, however, are willingly displayed by those who support Howard Brunn in his campaign. These people are local residents, artists, writers, photographers, teachers, designers, attorneys and so on. They are people of good taste who care about the appearance of our town.

Bear in mind if you will, a bumper sticker is easily and quickly removed but the wrong man in the position of mayor lingers on for a long and painful time, even beyond his tenure as mayor.

I hope for Carmel's sake that we see Howard Brunn elected mayor on April 8.

Wants a little peace

Dear Editor:

I do not care who is elected mayor next month, as long as it is somebody who will bring back a little peace and quiet to this village.

For example, till almost 2:30 this morning we were kept awake by a loud engine from a truck parked at the General Store. On inquiring with the police I was informed that they "were cleaning out the kitchen." Does no council regulation cover this?

It's bad enough that we have to put up with the drunks and their loud noises at 2 a.m. as they lurch up the street searching for their cars and when they find them spend 10 minutes revving the engine, etc., etc.

Why the police do not observe what happens outside this place and the Forge in the Forest at 2 a.m. and make a few arrests I'll never know.

If the Forge in the Forest and the General Store can't conform with Carmel standards, how about restricting their license to operate till 11 p.m.? Then people whose homes they park outside of might get a decent night's sleep and isn't that what Carmel is all about?

The artist's friend

Dear Editor:

Apparently a new strangeness may be added to those lovable eccentricities that make Carmel so unique.

A town with no street numbers and no house-to-house delivery of mail. A place where the pine tree is venerated and around which the roads go.

Although the lots are small they are priceless and certainly no person of Negro blood has owned any of this dirt. Except Fairy Lee Bird.

In this one village about 80 galleries exist. There are damn few artists who can afford to live in Carmel unless they grew up with the place.

The new quaintness would result from the elimination of the only store that sells art supplies. Because of rent going up higher than a sea gull in an updraft, Fred Klepich may be forced to close Studio Art Supplies. Fred is a kind and gentle man. He has never failed to consider the artist as a human being, and often a needy one.

Lucky Carmel

Dear Editor:

Lucky Carmel! While the national political choices offer voters a Tweedle-Dum vs. a Tweedle-Dee, Carmel voters may choose one of three able, experienced candidates for mayor. All three are equally dedicated to the preservation and continuation of the many things that make our village unique.

The big problems facing our crowded cities: lack of public funding to cope with urban decay; inflation that threatens the economic and social life of a nation, are not the most important issues here as elsewhere. What we need are officials aware of the insidious dangers of unplanned growth and what developers misname "progress."

All three candidates seemingly agree on these goals and promise to uphold the traditions of old Carmel. At last Sunday's Brunn rally at the Thunderbird Book Store, however, the real Carmel oldtimers spoke for their choice.

"Howie is my man. I knew him when he was in rompers. A good boy, a good man and a good mayor for Carmel." (Mrs. Green Chapman, 50 year resident.)

"His father and mother contributed much to Carmel 50 years ago and he will do the same as mayor." (Frank Lloyd, Carmel historian.)

"I am the oldest living resident and I am here to help Howard." (Unidentified elderly gentleman.)

What of the other two fine public spirited candidates? We need not lose their valuable services in any case. Mike will still be a member of the council and Barney can be appointed by the winner.

Lucky Carmel!

Identify 'Ben'

Dear Editor:

I wonder if you weren't writing with tongue in cheek or feeling just a bit hypocritical when you wrote your editorial on secrecy.

Your anonymous political column titled, "View Through a Grapestake Fence" has vigorously backed certain candidates and maligned others throughout the campaign.

Could the author(s) be concerned that disclosure of past or present relationships with these candidates would negate any effectiveness the column might have in shaping public opinion?

Since you have called for an end to secrecy in public affairs, why not set an example in your own paper. At the very least you should identify the author(s) in the same manner that you identify letter writers who do not have the courage of their convictions — "name withheld by request." Perhaps that doesn't evoke the same folksy image that "Ben" might have, but it is a lot more honest.

An ego trip?

Dear Editor:

Thank God that Barney Laiolo is willing to again serve our beautiful city of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

If he is elected as mayor, his compassion, his practical thinking and past leadership will again help to return our City Council from a comedy of errors and two years of no accomplishments back to its proper role as a policy-making body with dignity and leadership at the healm.

Mike Brown and Howard Brunn are already on the council. Why have another appointed council person instead of an elected one? They have two years yet to serve. Is it an ego trip that they need to run for the seat of mayor? Have they forgotten that it is an honor and a privilege to be able to serve our city?

The citizens of Carmel-by-the-Sea have an opportunity in this election to elect three new persons with common sense to serve on our City Council and I urge you to do so.

We do not need "wish lists" for our community. We need decisions made and action taken. The only way to be sure is to elect Barney Laiolo for mayor; Larry Morago and Alan Williams for council.

'Gets things done'

Dear Editor:

I have known Mike Brown since he first became a Carmel councilman.

He believes in preserving the charm and unique qualities that make Carmel the place we all love. His stand on restricting (and virtually eliminating) tour buses, saving the post office, helping our young people and his improvement in the city's safety programs are just a few of the many things Mike Brown has done for us.

While his record of getting things done for residents is a well-known fact, I find his honesty and dedication both refreshing and unique in city government today.

Please vote for Mike Brown for mayor April 8th.

Mayor, council aspirants oppose rent controls

THE NINE CANDIDATES for mayor and City Council turned their attention to annexation, rent and controls on use of property, and the supposed rift between residents and businessmen at the second Common Sense Committee "town meeting" March 20 at Sunset Center.

There was little disagreement among the aspirants on the desirability of annexation, the undesirability of rent and use controls, and the "non-problem" between residents and businessmen.

"I believe Carmel should reach its natural boundaries," Brunn said. "These are physical as well as philosophical boundaries." He said that the boundaries should be the Carmel River to the south, the Pacific Ocean to the west, Pescadero Canyon to the north and Highway 1 or Hatton Canyon to the east.

Brunn said he expects that annexation "will not impact city coffers a tremendous amount." He said the city has enough equipment to serve the annexed areas, with the exception of fire service.

Brunn said that "there is no such thing as residents versus business in the city of Carmel. The business district provides well over half of the income for the city. You can't just say these guys (businessmen) are the bad guys . . . you can't just say the residents are living in the past and that they don't know what they're doing (just because) they love pine trees. It has to be a team effort."

Brunn stressed the actions earlier that day of an ad hoc committee to help resolve a landlord-tenant dispute. (See story on Carmel Craft Studios elsewhere in this issue.)

Brunn claimed that the ad hoc committee mechanism "works fantastic" and is "a substitution for rent and use controls. Frankly, if I had not got involved in the situation through the committee three days ago, we'd probably have a moratorium on rent in the commercial district right now," Brunn said.

MAYORAL CANDIDATE MIKE Brown said that he, too, participated in the ad hoc committee earlier that day, as well as in the Dock Lor-Dick Bruhn negotiations. He said that "rent controls really wouldn't be in the best interests of Carmel."

Brown said he likes "the mixture of residents and businesses in the village and wants to avoid drawing "a line down the middle" of the city.

Brown, who says he is "cautious about large scale annexations," supports state-level legislation that would allow voters in communities of fewer than 10,000 persons to vote in annexation issues where the annexed areas have at least 10 percent of the population or assessed property valuation of the city to which it might be annexed. Passage of the bill would allow Carmelites to vote in future annexation issues involving Hatton Fields, Carmel Point, Carmel Woods and other outlying areas.

Brown said that State Assemblyman Henry Mello recently introduced the legislation.

Brown reorted that the city of Petaluma recently dropped annexation plans when it "discovered it would have a negative cash impct" on that city. Brown said that the "ballgame has changed since Proposition 13."

MAYORAL CANDIDATE BARNEY Laiolo began his presentation by saying, "I hope we never have rent controls."

He said that "not all landlords are bad guys," and the city should not enact legislation to penalize the many good landlords.

Laiolo said that Carmelites "are smart enough" to decide how to proceed with annexation. "We don't need LAFCO to decide how to proceed with annexation. "We don't need LAFCO (Local Agency Formation Commission) to tell us what our boundaries are," he said.

Valerio Biondo, the write-in candidate for mayor, opposed rent and use controls. "Less government is better," he said.

Biondo said that it is "a phantom war" that exists between residents and businessmen. "Most of these 'problems' are not problems at all," he said. "Let's enjoy what we have. We're discussing phantom issues."

COUNCIL ASPIRANT FRANK Lloyd suggested that a group of citizens and businessmen is a better tool for solving commercial rent disputes than "legislation coming down hard on landlords."

Lloyd also favored annexation of adjacent areas of the city because, he later told the Pine Cone, it "would bring more young people into participaton in city affairs."

He added that there is "not much of a resident-businessman problem since Howard Brunn came on the council two years ago."

Jim Wright, a council candidate, said that Carmel residents "should have a voice in annexation."

He suggested that "as an interim measure" the city should "have an advisory ballot measure" on annexation. He said that the council should proceed "by all means at its disposal" if the voters indicate a preference for annexation. He said that "we should lay the cards on the table about the costs of servicing" the annexed areas.

Wright asked why the resident-business community rift was "always a campaign issue." He decried the exodus of resident-serving businesses from the commercial district, and stated that between 1957 and 1979 the number of galleries, gift, craft, jewelry and antique shops soared from 68 to 224.

"There's a saying," Wright said, "that when you're up to your ears in alligators, it's too late to drain the swamp. And I think they (the alligators) are getting closer."

Wright said he is "in principle against rent controls," but added that they might be effective "as a short term measure" while other means are devised.

ALAN WILLIAMS, ALSO A council candidate, said that "it is time we all look at the city as a whole."

He said that residents of Carmel Point, Hatton Fields and other areas use the city libraries, streets and other facilities. He said he favors annexation.

He said it is every resident's "responsibility to maintain the spirit of Carmel. It is unfair to impose (that task) upon property owners."

Williams said tne council should consider the creation of a list of significant establishments in the city, and then to "explore all avenues to maintain them. Residentially-oriented businesses are what we're all interested in," he said.

Council incumbent Helen Arnold said she is "generally opposed to rent and use controls." She said the "law of supply and demand" provides a good balance in the downtown area.

Arnold suggested that the city consider a "windfall profits

Citizens committee forums tonight

The Carmel Citizens Committee will conduct two public forums for City Council and mayoral candidates today (Thursday, March 27) at the Carmel Woman's Club at San Carlos and Ninth.

The informal afternoon program from 4-6 p.m. will give the public a chance to meet with the candidates individually. Refreshments will be served.

The evening program from 8-10 will include statements by each of the nine candidate on local issues, followed by an audience question and answer period.

Elections will be April 8.

FOUR NEW POLICE CARS are patrolling Carmel streets. Carmel Police Chief Bill Ellis said that the department trded in its four 1977 Pontiac LeMans patrol cars for four 1980 Dodge Aspens.

The new vehicles cost the department "about $6,000 each, less trade-in," Ellis said. They were purchased with money from the traffic safety fund, which is supported by traffic violation fines.

Ellis said that the old cars logged 60,000-70,000 miles each. He said that because of the nature of police work, 60,000-70,000 miles on a police car "is roughly equivalent to 120,000 miles on a normal, privately owned car."

HE ADDED THAT the new cars are more maneuverable and should be more economical to operate. The new vehicles are about six inches shorter and 10 inches narrower than the Pontiacs, Ellis said.

The Police Chief said that the first of the new cars went into service Friday, March 7. By Monday, March 17 all four were in service.

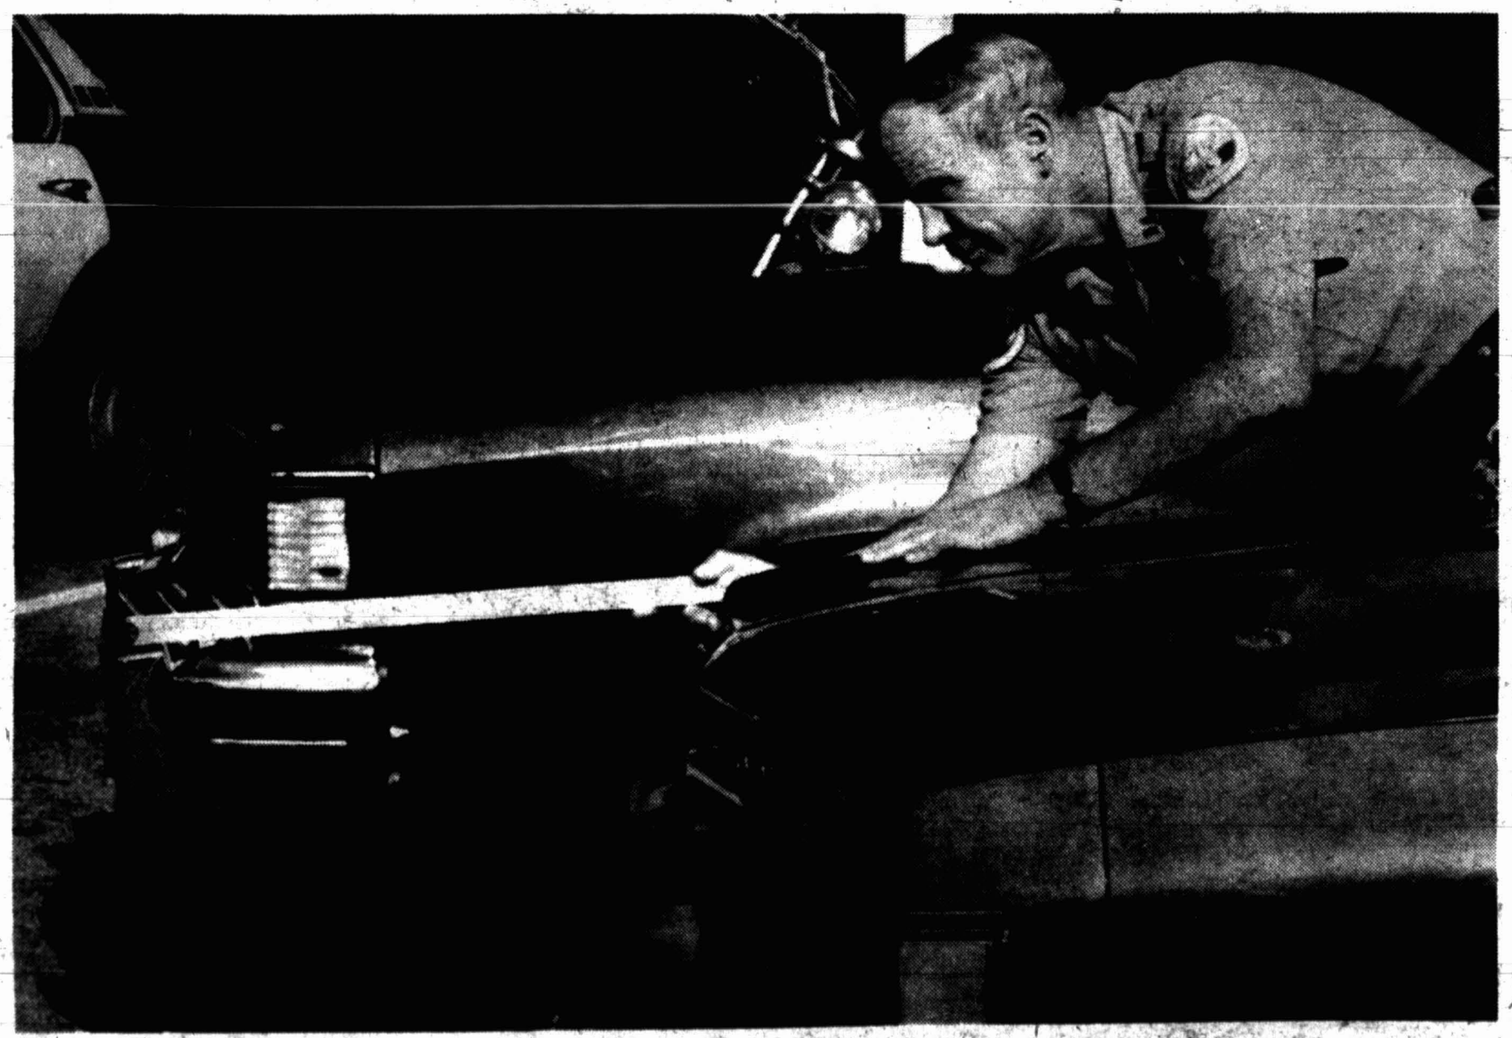

Ellis said that the cars have been fitted with the police radios and cages from the older patrol vehicles.

COUNCILMAN HOWARD BRUNN voted against authorization of the purchase of the vehicles at the Nov. 5 council meeting. Brunn argued for smaller, more fuel-efficient cars — perhaps diesel powered. He suggested further that the officers get "out of their cars and do more walking in the village."

Last week Brunn told the Pine Cone that the new cars "represent the best compromise" between the needs of the Carmel Police Department and fuel conservation.

"I still wish they would walk more, though," Brunn said.

City planners propose law to control short-term rentals

THE CARMEL PLANNING COMMISSION has recommended to the City Council an ordinance that would control short-term rentals of residential properties.

The ordinance, if enacted by the council, would entitle an owner to allow friends and relatives to occupy his dwelling, provided that no rent or things of value are exchanged for the occupancy.

The ordinance would also allow all or part of the dwelling to be rented to other persons, provided the occupancy is for at least a one-week period; that the owner or permanent occupant is on vacation or business elsewhere — and that the owner or permanent occupant resides in the dwelling for at least 270 days in any 12-month period in which such transient rentals occur.

Dwellings that qualify for rental of one week or more "shall be registered with the city clerk by the permanent occupant of the dwelling or his duly authorized agent. Such registration shall set forth a definitive period of time for the rental, the name and mailing address of the renter, and such other information as the clerk may reasonably require.

"A separate registration will be required for each separate rental. There will be no fee required for registration."

It would be a misdemeanor for anyone — including a property owner, tenant, real estate broker, real estate salesperson or any other person — to "arrange, negotiate, advertise or otherwise act to create a transient occupancy."

COMMISSIONERS ACCEPTED Land-Use Committee amendments to the draft ordinance at their March 19 meeting.

The principal alterations proposed by the committee at its March 12 meeting involved the registration procedure and the inclusion of the phrase "or any part thereof" after references to "dwelling units" in the text.

The City Council referred the proposed law to the Planning Commission for study last September. The commission was instructed to consider council comments made at the Sept. 4 public hearing, and the recommendations of City Attorney George Brehmer.

Before the March 19 commission meeting, chairman Robert Stephenson told the Pine Cone that the commissioners "liked the proposed ordinance the way it was (before the Sept. 4 hearing) and will send it back to the City Council without major changes."

After the March 19 meeting, Stephenson said that the commission did just that. "The changes we made are minor hand have to do with the language, not the intent of the ordinance," he said.

STEPHENSON ADDED THAT passage of the ordinance by the City Council would be "a real service to the town. We'd be gaining permanent — or quasi-permanent — residents for the town. We'd be discouraging — outlawing in fact — weekend rentals of houses.

"I think it's only reasonable that the resident schoolteacher or businessman or whoever should be able to rent out his house when he goes on vacation. The law would certainly allow for that."

City Administrator Doug peterson said that the City Council is scheduled to conduct a public hearing on the proposed ordinance on April 7.

Council aspirants oppose rent controls tax" on Carmel property. "Sometimes we have someone who's out to make a killing," she said.

Arnold said that annxation would provide "too many benefits to ignore" to the city and the annexed area. She cited Sunset Center as an example.

Arnold added that residents should not forget that the business district provides about 70 percent of the city's revenue, chiefly through the hostelry tax.

LARRY MORAGO, A COUNCIL candidate, said that annexation "makes sense." He said that residents of the outlying areas "have the same attitudes" as Carmelites.

"Take a look at any place that's tried rent controls," he said. "They just don't work." He said that an extreme example of their not working is in the South Bronx, where "landlords hire people to burn their buildings in order to collect insurance."

Morago said he'd like "to declare the end of the war between the residential and business communities." He said that it was a "phantom war" to begin with — "an artifical separation." Morago said that the problem lies in the attachment of the "resident" or "business" labels that are given to many Carmel residents.

Kindergarten signup opens at River School

Kindergarten registration has opened at Carmel River School for the school year starting in September, according to Principal Dr. Vance Frasier.

Parents whose children are five years old now or will be five by Dec. 2, 1980, should register their children at the school office located at 15th and Monte Verde.

"The child does not have to be present for registration," Frasier said. "Parents should bring a copy of a birth certificate and health immunization records."

Children will be asked to attend a kindergarten screening on May 13.

Storkie is dead

STORKIE, "THE LION of the Golden Bough Courtyard," was a popular, if not exactly gregarious cat caught here by Carmel cartoonist Bill Bates.

'Sick person' tortured Golden Bough feline?

By KEITH YATES

STORKIE, "THE LION OF the Golden Bough Courtyard," is dead.

The 1½-year-old male cat was doused with gasoline Sunday afternoon and had to be put to sleep several hours later by Carmel veterinarian Robert Bramman.

Storkie was "a community institution" in the Golden Bough courtyard on Ocean near Monte Verde.

"Storkie belonged to everyone in the court," said Ken Otrich, owner of Candles of Carmel, a shop in the courtyard. "My wife, Ruthie, and I fed him, Benny and Tom (Enea, owners of Sade's) fed him, and the people at Anzel's Cafe fed him. The whole courtyard sort of adopted him. Storkie lived here and Storkie died here."

STORKIE WAS FOUND at the courtyard screaming and reeking of gasoline at about 2:15 Sunday afternoon.

Otrich said that he immediately called the Carmel-By-The-Sea Veterinary Hospital at Torres and Fifth, and then the Carmel Police Department for assistance.

Otrich said that within two minutes officer Terry Lacoma arrived to take Storkie to the hospital. Otrich sat in the front seat with Storkie while the police siren whined through the streets.

Dr. Bramman said that Storkie's "head and shoulders were saturated with gasoline. It was in his eyes, ears, nose and throat. It was pretty severe. He began to salivate and lick the areas, which made it worse."

Otrich told the doctor that it would be best to put the animal to sleep. "I didn't want Storkie to go through all that pain and recover, only to have to go through the whole thing again, if the idiot who did this took it in his head again," he said.

Otrich said that Storkie had cuts and abrasions on the rest of his body. "Some probably came from cat fights," he said. Otrich was not sure about the other cuts.

Others in the Golden Bough Courtyard thought that Storkie may have been maimed by the person or persons responsible for the dousing. "I hadn't thought of it before, but maybe it was a kind of torture," said Judy Lozen, who works at Anzel's Cafe. "The person who did this was sick, that's for sure," she said.

OTRICH SAID THAT Storkie was so named because "he was the 'store kitty.' He was a quiet cat, a very much loved cat," Otrich said.

"Customers would come back to the courtyard after months — even a year once — and ask: 'Is Storkie still around?' And sure enough, Storkie would be sleeping on a pillow in his usual spot outside.

"Things are going to be a little sadder around here for a while," Otrich said softly. "There wasn't a shopkeeper or regular customer here who didn't know and love Storkie.

"He was only a tiny kitten when I found him peering through the store window a year and a half ago. He never journeyed far from his home here. We made him a little house here," he said, opening a padlocked gate to a small enclosed area in the courtyard. "Looks different now that Storkie won't be coming back."

Carmel Police Chief Bill Ellis said he has no clues as to who might have doused Storkie.

"I want to tell you that we've got some pretty tough cops in this department," Ellis said. "But everyone around here was saddened about Storkie on Sunday."

She's 'had it' with trees

By KEITH YATES

TO YOU, a tree is probably a thing of dignity, a symbol of strength, propriety and uprightness.

Donna Chenoweth would say you've got pine needles in your head. She said she's been hassled about her trees to the point where seeing a Pinus radiata tempts her to cuss like a lumberjack.

It all started, she told the Pine Cone, when she wanted to extirpate a low-bred, raffish black acacia in the back yard of her home on Lobos between Third and Fourth.

Chenoweth, a 58-year-old retired Civil Service worker, said she phoned City Forester Greg D'Ambrosio to get permission to pull up the tree. "He told me to go ahead, long as it was on my own property, which it was," she said.

"That was a year, maybe a year and a half ago," she said, staring at a front yard crowded with trees and bushes.

"Then, in March or April last year, I got a letter from D'Ambrosio saying I shouldn't have pulled up that ornery ol' acacia. Said that I hadn't told him that I'd been building onto the house within six months previous of ripping out the acacia, and that invalidated my permit.

"I said, 'Well, I'd've told you if you'd asked.' He said I was going to have to plant four trees—five-gallon Monterey pines—to make up for tearing out that nasty ol' acacia."

Chenoweth wondered how one "scraggled, kitty-wampus, no-account acacia" could be worth four brand new Monterey pines.

But she bought the new trees anyway. Then she phoned the city forester again and asked where to put them, she said. "He came out and poked a little red flag in the spots where the trees should go. Two flags were on my property, and two were on the public property strip in front of my house, where I park my car."

SHE SAID the public property spots were next to large Monterey pines, and their roots got in her way when she tried to dig holes for the new trees.

"Well, sir, I toted out my pick-ax and I picked and stabbed at those big roots till I'd worked up a hole so you could ding nigh poke a four-gallon pine in there. By the time I got done kickin' and stompin' and cussin', there was room for the whole five gallons, with maybe a quart to spare," she said.

"But I tell you, those little saplings had a sadness and doom about 'em, and I knew they weren't going to make it."

They didn't. "I don't know what got them, but pretty soon they were turning every color but green," Chenoweth said. She speculated that the trees may have been fatally irrigated by a large, short-haired dog from the next block.

•

"WELL, in December, about six months after they're dead and gone, I get a letter from the forester saying my trees are kaput. He says I better plant two new ones in the same spots, as if the situation with the roots and parking and the short-haired dog has changed any.

"Now that just takes the cake, far as I can cipher it out."

She said she doesn't know when she'll get around to buying the replacement pines.

SHE ADDED she plans to remodel her kitchen soon. "The city'll tell me to plant those blasted pines before I can get a permit for the remodeling, I guess. So I'll go out and get two more pines, plant them and watch them turn colors and die. When the remodeling is over, I'll probably get another letter saying to put in two more pines to replace the dead ones.

"Pretty soon my parking spot will be just a temporary resting place for doomed young wayward pines, I reckon," she said.

"I wonder how long this will keep up?"

In the meantime, Chenoweth is not lamenting the loss of the two trees. Nor has she forgotten the old black acacia.

She walked out onto the back porch and, squinting at the scarred spot where her acacia had been, sighed: "As far as scabbiness and laziness go, you couldn't find a tree to touch that acacia. But after my run-in with bureaucrats and young pines, I can see that underneath those scabs was a tree that had backbone."

DONNA CHENOWETH indicates the spot where she planted a "doomed young wayward pine" on orders from the city forester. The tree, now memorialized by a cluster of rocky tombstones, probably perished because of over-irrigation by a surly neighborhood cur, Chenoweth said. (Alan McEwen photo)

CHENOWETH PLANTED the pines where the city forester tapped in his marker flags. She is beginning to lament the day she pulled up a scraggled-but-spunky acacia in her backyard. Because she had an invalid permit for the removal, Chenoweth had to plant four Monterey pines. (Alan McEwen photo)

Before you remove that tree, call the city

If you want to remove a tree on your property — whether your tree is scraggled or just in the way — you should first phone Carmel City Forester Greg D'Ambrosio at 624-3543 to obtain a permit.

Carmel laws control removals on all public property, and on private property that is either under construction or vacant.

The Regional Coastal Commission controls removals on Carmel private property that is not vacant and not under construction.

Applicants denied a permit may appeal to the Coastal Commission.

The city will control removals now under Coastal Commission jurisdiction once the Carmel Local Coastal Program becomes law.

Illegal tree removal may result in suspension of construction or remodeling permits, replacement of the tree by the property owner, and/or fines.

The Regional Coastal Commission has offices in Santa Cruz. The telephone number is (408) 426-7390.

Carmel residents will get an early jump on the 1980 Census.

The 1980 Census questionnaire will be mailed to every household in the nation this week. It will be delivered to approximately 86 million households, housing some 222 million people, by April 1.

In the city of Carmel, however, the questionnaire will be hand delivered to each residence because of the unique mailing system here, according to Dick Bragg, census district office manager for San Luis Obispo, Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties.

Bragg said that 10-12 census workers will distribute the questionnaire to the estimated 3,000 households here today through Saturday. He said that each worker will identify himself when he calls on a household to deliver the census form.

Residents will be asked to complete the questionnaire and mail it back. Those households that do not return the completed questionnaire as requested will be visited by enumerators who will obtain the required information.

"The city of Carmel is the only place in the country that has this unique mailing system," Bragg said. He explained that the hand-delivery program was deemed necessary for Carmel to be sure that all households here received the questionnaire. "There was no physical way we could distribute it through the post office in Carmel," Bragg said.

The U.S. Constitution requires that there be a census once every 10 years.

The questionnaire will cover such topics as age, race, sex, marital status, type of housing unit, education, occupation — all of which were included on the 1970 questionnaire. But there will be more emphasis in the 1980 Census on gathering racial and ethnic origin information. New questions will also try to determine national energy and travel-to-work patterns.

The data will determine the distribution of federal funds to deserving regions throughout the country.

Many local students at the York School in Monterey were recognized for their academic excellence in the second trimester of the school year.

Local students attaining High Honors were Jennifer Beck, Joanna Lee and Sharon Lee, all of Carmel; Louise Boone and Kent Nybakken, both of Carmel Valley, and Stephen Cocker of Pebble Beach.

Local students on the Honors list included Lillian Dean, Carol Lloyd, Patricia Meem, Regina Panholzer, Bobby Ryu, Rachal Schnal and Daisy Smith, all of Carmel; Avery Reate and Michael Roberts, both of Carmel Highlands; Laura Bennett, Daniel Brehmer, Karen Parker and David Sackman, all of Carmel Valley, and Amanda Godfrey of Pebble Beach.

The Celtic Chronicles

AFTER A YEAR sabbatical leave in Scotland, English teacher Frederick "Buzz" Rainer returned to Carmel High School this year with a charming surprise. He had written a full-length epic poem, complete with Scottish dialect, about his eperiences in that country.

Rainer thanked the Board of Education of the Carmel Unified School District for "allowing my wife and I to go to Scotland where it was so cold we froze."

He related to the board at its March 11 meeting some of the encounters that he and his wife had which revealed the difference in lifestyles between the Scottish Highlanders and people in the United States.

"The men wear skirts," Rainer said with a smirk. "And we found out what they do or don't wear beneath, but I'm not telling."

An English teacher at the high school since 1955, Rainer said he wrote his poem in the style of famed Scottish poet Robert Burns. Rainer admitted, "I haven't a drop of Scottish blood in me," then went on to read his poem in a gallant Scottish brogue.

The poem, filled with humor, tales of travel and insights into that land of Scotland, follows.

"L'ENVOI"

INVOCATION

I need your inspiration, Lord,
For once again I've conned the Board.
I hope my plea is not ignored
And that ye hear it.
Oh, let me strike a silver chord
Or pretty near it.

I want to tell them how a son,
And I'll admit a wayward one,
Set out to have a bit o' fun
On Scotia's shore;
And how he made the minutes run like none before.

•

WEATHERING LOWS—Canto I

So now in verses I'll relate
The simple story of my fate,
And don't expect it to be great;
It's mediocre:
Like pairin' up an ace and eight
While playin' poker.

A year ago the Scottish land
Was colder than a "dead man's hand,"
And what I thought would be so grand
Was far from pleasin';
No Eskimo could understand
That kind o' freezin'.

My feet and fingers fairly froze,
So did the hair inside my nose,
And though I put on all my clothes,
It was na matter—
My teeth at first and then my toes
Began to chatter.

The buses skidded to a halt;
The world became an icy vault;
And though it was nobody's fault,
We all did shiver.
Thank God the barley and the malt
Preserved my liver.

O Lord, the skylight in the bath
Had long endured Your holy wrath
And lost a most important lath,
For I below
Sat squarely in the chilly path
Of fallin' snow!

Enough of this about the weather;
Let's concentrate upon the heather:
The breath of spring was like a feather
Up in Marin
Where naked people sit together
In tubs of sin.

•

A VERY LITTLE LEARNING—Canto II

But lest ye think me still a fool,
I'll say a word about my school:
'Twas not so great, but as a rule,
'Twas time well spent;
Besides it's foolish bein' cruel—
'Twas why I went.

My mentors I would chronicle
From very boring down to dull.
'Twere only three who didn't lull
Me off to sleep;
Their wisdom nothing can annul;
'Tis mine to keep.

But I had one, a Dr. Lowe,
A man ye doubtless dinna know;
And he revealed the ebb and flow
Of living tides;
He made the world of words to glow
On all its sides.

He talked of Shakespeare, don't ya see,
As if he were a symphony
That never had a minor key
In all the score.
I'll treasure what he gave to me
Forever more.

I went to learn to speak the Scots,
For here at home the language rots;
The kids today are Hottentots
In English usage,
Expounding "ethnic polyglots"
And rank abusage.

But Scotland's academic ilk
Affects a speech as smooth as silk
Their language flows like richest milk
And nothin' less.
My "profs" with words could doubtless bilk
The I.R.S.

•

OF COURSES—Canto III

And now my hat I have to doff
Unto the ancient game of golf.
You can be sure I'll never scoff
At Scottish courses.
They're tricker than pullin' off
Carmel divorces.

I did achieve my greatest goal:
St. Andrews has a famous hole;
At seventeen the bells will toll
For those who mar it;
But I, who had to sell my soul,
Contrived to par it.

I also parred the great eighteen,
Although I missed the bloody green
And landed in the "in between,"
The Vale of Sin;
And then I chipped so crisp and clean
And putted in.

The feat, of course, was never planned;
'Twas no performance by command.
A passerby, you understand,
Said he would laud me,
But 'twas so cold that neither hand
Would dare applaud me.

•

CUPS O'KINDNESS—Canto IV

Now Scotland's famous for its drink,
The kind that makes a fellow think
He's getting closer to the brink
Of all damnation;
But every time the classes clink
'Tis pure elation.

Glenlivet and Glenfiddich too
Are brews that I shall ever rue.
I only wish I could undo
The harm they've done,
But I am sorrier for you
Who missed the fun.

The pubs of Scotland you will see
Are shrines of camaraderie.
They're places where a man can be
Among his brothers;
Where he can feel that ecstasy:
Concern for others.

•

BILL OF UNFAIR—Canto V

Now don't I know that you will nag us
Until I've told you of the haggis.
Our neighbors never failed to rag us
Till we'd partaken;
And if ye think it dinna gag us,
You're sore mistaken!

In fact the whole of Scottish food
We found to be a trifle crude.
I'm not intending to be rude,
But neeps and oats
Would get the chef at Ernie's sued
By billy goats.

I really am na being fair.
Of finest foods we had our share;
To Prestonfield we did repair
For rich repast.
If I'm condemned, I shall declare
That meal my last.

•

TOUR DE FARCE—Canto VI

In spring we toured both far and wide
Around the Scottish countryside,
A land where beauty's undenied;
It was pure pleasure.
We always traveled open-eyed
To miss no treasure.

And certainly ye well may guess
We saw the monster of Loch Ness.
The thing was eatin' watercress
And drinkin' tea.
The Scots pull legs, I must confess,
As well as we.

We journeyed out to Mull and Skye,
Where beauty makes a body cry;
Indeed, we dinna have an eye
But dropped a tear.
This meeting of the sa and sky
Brings heaven near.
Along the waters of Loch Tay
If ever you should chance to stray,
You'll find a soul-sequestered way
To hide your grief;
Where Nature in her quiet way
May bring relief.

The bird that sings upon the bough,
The goat, the sheep, the brindled cow
Will all combine, I don't know how,
To ease your pain;
And suddenly the here and now
Is right again.

For standing on that pleasant scene
Ye will forget what might have been;
Your senses never were so keen
About the past;
And if ye know not what I mean,
You've breathed your last.

If castles cause your heart to thrill,
Oh, here ye may your fancy fill.
There's one on every Scottish hill,
And all are old;
I'd hate to pay the heatin' bill—
They're bloody cold.

Balmoral too, Culzean in Ayr,
And Craigievar was also fair;
But 'twas too many
For castles now I dinna care
A single penny.

By Dryburgh Abbey's ancient alter.
That mighty master dinna palter
When buying stones.
He might as well have had Gibraltar

But Burns, upon the other hand,
Was stuffed into a plot of land
Until the Scots could understand
The fellow's worth;
And now a mausoleum grand
Contains his earth.

GREAT SCOTS! Canto VII

The reason that the Scots are tough
Is not their climate is so rough,
But that they have had wars enough
To kill 'em all;
The ones who've lived are of the stuff
Survives a brawl.

Some people say the Scots are tight.
I know for sure they are not right.
They'll lend you anything in sight
Despite their thrift.
To friends in deep financial plight
They give the gift.

Now when it comes to makin' sweaters,
The Scots they dinna have na betters.
To buy them though will make you debtors,
But never fear:
You'll go to prison bound in fetters
Of pure cashmere.

Another myth about these folks
Is that the Scots are dour blokes
Who take no joy in quips or jokes.
'Tis but a rumor!
Each year ten thousand of 'em chokes
On Celtic humor.

Unless the Scotsmen walk on stilts,
You'll never see beneath their kilts;
I'm sure they all wear patchwork quilts
For underwear.
Until the world severely tilts,
Ye need na care!

To obviate potential gripes,
I'll say a word about the pipes.
Some say they're music's wayward types;
They may be right.
Their skirl is like the sound of snipes
Disturbed at night.

Yet when the dancers whirl and wheel,
You really canna help but feel
The indescribable appeal
Of all the nation;
The pipes are to a country reel,
An invitation.

Now Edinburgh is a town
In which you seldom see a frown.
I love the walkin' up and down
On Princess Street,
Where folks of high and low renown
May set their feet.

I also love the street called Rose.
It's lined with pubs that seldom close.
The maids behind the bars are those
Will call you "deary."
And evenings at the Crown and Rose
Are always cheery.

In rugby when the Scots cavort,
The game can be a lethal sport.
The players all end up in court
Or else they're buried.
Such contests fall but slightly short
Of being married.

At curling too the Scots are grand.
They only need an icy strand,
A heavy stone and steady hand,
And quarts of whisky.
For players who attempt to stand,
The sport is risky.

And so we leave the Scottish shore—
The kind of partin' I deplore,
But still it's not forever more;
We'll be returning;
For what adventures lie in store
We're always yearning.

O Scotland, you're a bonnie isle.
For sure you made the Rainers smile.
Our time ye managed to beguile
With all your charm.
May heaven keep you safe awhile
From earthly harm.

Nuclear plant accident remembered

The first anniversary of the 3 Mile Island nuclear plant accident will be commemorated Friday and Saturday, March 28-29 with a candlelight vigil and rally sponsored by the Society Uniting for Non-Nuclear Years.

Everyone is welcome to participate in a candlelight ceremony Friday at Colton Hall, Pacific Street, Monterey from 6:30-8 p.m.

A march will begin at noon Saturday at parking lot A of Monterey Peninsula College, Monterey and proceed to Custom House Plaza, located near Old Fisherman's Wharf, Monterey.

A rally, which will continue from 1-6 p.m., will present speakers on energy alternatives, musicians, information booths and refreshments. Speakers will include Francis Heisler, civil liberties lawyer; Anne Bartee of Friends of Grove; Larson Simmons, American Indian Movement and Bill Powers, MPC Solar Energy Coalition. Musicians are Warren John Wolfe, Brian Diamond, Country Magic and more.

Child care will be provided by reservation.

The Legend...

In 1917 fate brought together two great women of our century face to face—Dr. Nadine Payot and the fabled ballerina, Anna Pavlova. "When I met Pavlova, I was struck by the curious difference between her face and body. Her beautiful body was still young and lissome and firm through daily exercise and lack of exposure to the elements, while her face was severely marked by age," reported Dr. Payot. "I was fascinated by the possibility of changing all that." Dr. Payot committed herself to the art and science of helping women protect their skin from moisture loss and protect their facial muscles from premature deterioration by proper massage and exercise. Her methods and preparations were so successful that the rich, the beautiful and the renowned flocked to the "Payot Institut de Beaute", located at the historical mansion of the Countess of Castiglione, where Napoleon III had once climbed incognito up the spiraling staircase to rejoin the Countess. Almost 60 years of success in more than 50 countries have proven the effectiveness of Payot.

'Doesn't constitute a health hazard'

Low-level contamination of CV groundwater discovered

LOW-LEVEL CONTAMINATION of groundwater in Carmel Valley has been discovered by the state Department of Water Resources. The contamination has been linked to septic tank discharge.

Unusually high levels of nitrates, ammonia and ortho-phosphates were found in samples taken from eight domestic and agricultural wells in 1978.

In a letter dated Feb. 22, 1980, the Department of Water Resources notified the Monterey County Health Department of its analyses of the samplings, stating that "something, probably septic tank effluent, is affecting the quality (of groundwater) since it is not normal to find ammonia, nitrates or ortho-phosphates in groundwaters."

Walter Wong, director of the county Health Department, said last week that the levels of nitrates and other elements do not constitute a health hazard.

Because of fears that the state's analyses indicate potential degradation of the Carmel Valley aquifer — the main source of water for the Monterey Peninsula — an immediate resampling of the eight wells is under way, Wong said.

> 'The state's analyses is significant because it is the first evidence from an outside agency that we may have degradation of groundwater (in Carmel Valley).' — Bruce Buel, general manager of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

Analysis for coliform and bacteria, the existence of which could be a health hazard, will be included in the sampling study, Wong said.

THE MONTEREY PENINSULA Water Management District is intitiating the sampling, and the results will be released by the end of this month, according to Bruce Buel, district general manager.

Buel emphasized that the low-level contamination found by the state is neither a health hazard nor necessarily a result of septic tank effluent reaching the groundwater. "Nitrates can come from agricultural fertilizers," he noted.

The water management district is concerned, however, that the state's analyses were conducted mostly on deep wells, Buel said. Shallower portions of the aquifer closer to the septic tank leach fields may show higher concentrations of contaminants, he said.

Buel disclaimed the state's findings, observing that the analyses were taken from "short-term samplings, and not from a coordinated comprehensive study."

•

THE WATER MANAGEMENT district has applied to the state Water Resources Control Board for a $140,000 grant to drill a series of shallow wells and to conduct samplings. Annual operating cost of the comprehensive monitoring system would be $30,000, paid for by taxpayers of the water management district, Buel explained.

Buel notes in the grant application that:

- "The Carmel Valley aquifer is the major source of domestic water for the Monterey Peninsula; existing groundwater quality in the basin is generally good, with the exception of high iron and manganese concentrations, which are of natural origin.
- "Potential pollutant sources are urban runoff, agricultural water percolation and septic tank effluent.
- "The wells sampled in the past were drilled relatively deep into the aquifer. The salt and pollutant loadings from septic tank systems, agricultural lands, impervious urban areas, urban landscaping and natural sources probably remain in the upper part of the aquifer and do not initially disperse uniformly throughout the aquifer."

Buel states, "The samples and laboratory analyses available at this time, although they do not show any major groundwater degradation, may not be true indicators of changing groundwater quality."

With increased growth in Carmel Valley, Buel declares that "groundwater at some time will be polluted in critical areas to such an extent that potable (drinking) water requirements would not be met."

•

THE MONITORING OF shallow wells will provide an "early-warning system," Buel told this newspaper last week. "We're concerned about stopping groundwater degradation before it's too late," he said.

The proposed monitoring system, if it qualifies for the state grant, will be in operation by June 1981.

If the water management district confirms this month that there is contamination of the aquifer, Buel said it has a "whole series of immediate remedial actions."

The district has the authority to require proper maintenance of private septic tanks either by commercial companies or the district itself if septic tank effluent is conclusively linked to groundwater degradation.

If the source of contamination is agricultural fertilizers that are settling into the groundwater, then it will require an analysis of the products being applied, Buel said. He added that the proposed monitoring system will be used to watch for increased fertilizer elements, mainly nitrates.

The public health standard for nitrate concentrations, established by the federal Environmental Protection Agency, limits the amount to 45 mg/1 (milligrams per liter). Buel notes in the grant application that nitrate levels in shallow portions of the aquifer could reach 18 mg/1 by the year 2000.

The highest concentration of nitrates found by the state in its analyses was 1.7 mg/1 in a domestic well located at the end of Pancho Way, near the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club in Mid-Carmel Valley.

THE EIGHT DOMESTIC and agricultural wells that were tested by the state in 1978 are located at: Boronda Road near Aliso Road; the end of Pancho Way; the end of Bonita Way; the north side of Carmel Valley Road, directly across from the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center; Cypress Lane (two wells); Schulte Road, immediately south of the Carmel River, and the east side of Robinson Canyon Road, about one-half mile south of Holt Road.

> 'It only indicates a symptom of what may be degradation of the groundwater from septic tanks.' — Gene Taylor, supervisor in charge of hydrology for the Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District.

Buel said the state's analyses are significant because "it is the first evidence from an outside agency that we may have degradation of groundwater (in Carmel Valley)."

Wells throughout the Valley are sampled regularly by the Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District.

Gene Taylor, supervisor in charge of hydrology for the district, stressed that the state's analyses turned up "levels of contamination that are very minute." He said, "It only indicates a symptom of what may be degradation of the groundwater from septic tanks."

The regular sampling by the district of 30 to 35 wells per year has consistently shown very low nitrate levels, Taylor said. A complete mineral analysis is conducted on certain wells every three years, he said. Mineral analyses have shown consistently high levels of the naturally-occuring iron and manganese, but nothing to indicate salts or mineral contamination from septic tanks, Taylor insisted.

•

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS of the Carmel Sanitary District discussed the state Department of Water Resources findings at its March 20 meeting.

Director Ted Weller questioned whether the samples were taken from old wells with pitted casings.

"Infiltration near the top of the wells from fertilizer nitrates will give inaccurate results," Weller insisted.

Michael Zambory, general manager of the sanitary district, noted, however, that the phosphates found with the nitrates "are not normally found in groundwater. They are only from septic tanks or animal wastes."

The sanitary district Areawide Facilities Plan concludes that structural sewering of the Valley and Carmel Highlands will be required to avoid contamination of the groundwater. The sewering and a main trunkline would cost between $32 and $54 million.

As an interim measure, the study recommends that the sanitary district review septic tank installations and provide septic tank maintenance and service. The study also recommends use of a groundwater monitoring system like the one proposed by the water management district.

The sanitary district proposes to annex a large area of the Valley to provide service and maintenance for on-site sewage disposal systems. The annexation proposal is being processed by the county Local Agency Formation Commission.

A public hearing will be conducted at a future date by the sanitary district to determine if an annexation election must be conducted. If more than 25 percent of the registered voters within the area proposed for annexation were to protest, then it must be put to a vote.

The groundwater monitoring program received solid support from residents attending a workshop conducted in January by the sanitary district. Many of the residents indicated that they would be willing to pay for a monitoring system, but not until proof is submitted that the groundwater is being contaminated.

SIGNS THAT OFFER commuters a means to beat the soaring cost of gas, parking problems and the wear on their vehicles are being installed along county routes. The signs inform motorists where they can phone for information about the new ridesharing program of Monterey County. About 550 residents are now enrolled in the program, which started last November. Program coordinator Craig Smith said that reply cards will soon be available at the Harrison Memorial Library in Carmel and local banks. Jack Nunes of the county Public Works Department installs a ridesharing sign on Carmel Valley Road near the Carmel Valley Inn. Smith said that this is one of 15 ridesharing signs being installed in the county. (George T.C. Smith photo)

Diary of a mad poison oak victim

Editor's Note: The following is a true account of reporter Steve Hellman's nine days with a severe poison oak rash. The diary begins on a sunny Sunday in late February when he contacted "the worst case of poison oak" he has ever experienced.

DAY OF CONTACT

Sunny, clear, warm winter day, perfect day for a hike. I arrange to meet my friend Ken at his home down the coast near Palo Colorado Canyon. We plan to go hiking into one of the canyons. I dress in short sleeves, long pants, Red Wing boots and bring along a daypack with some oranges and nut mix. As an after-thought I bring a long-sleeve shirt, but end up leaving it in the car. It is too nice a day for long sleeves.

We leave Ken's house on foot at noon, taking a fire road down the ridge into Garapata Creek. Ken says the road will take us into the deep canyon, then we can follow the creek farther back. (Garrapata is Spanish for "wood tick.")

Deep-shaded redwood forest, trail damp with dew, birdcalls in the upper branches, ferns and lush green growth on the forest floor. We leave the road's end. We hike up the canyon, following close to the stream, its water clouded with muddy rain runoff.

The bushwhacking isn't easy. We have to scramble up near-vertical slopes to get around cliffs. We use tree branches, bush stems and exposed rocks to pull ourselves over the terrain. Breathless, we stop at points to reconnoiter, the canyon ahead looking steeper, narrower.

The forest is thick with fallen trees covered in wet moss. Several times we have to cross the stream on boulders and logs. At no time do I notice poison oak.

An impassable point. Canyon walls, sheer cliffs. Old battered Chevy two-door rolled down the cliff into the stream. No way to go but up. We attempt the north face of the canyon, climbing into dry chaparrel. Small sprigs of poison oak are growing beneath the brush. I'm careful to avoid it, but forget to watch as the brush gets so thick we can't go further. We turn back, the vines and branches lashing at my exposed neck, arms, face and hands.

Back at the stream, I scrub my sweaty neck and arms with cool water. The feeling is delicious. In five minutes we climb the south side of the canyon through ferns and redwoods to a road that takes us over the ridge into Palo Colorado Canyon and then back to Ken's.

At home that evening a warm shower feels good. I get into fresh clothes. As I go to bed, I notice only a slight prickly discomfort under my arms.

DAY OF REALIZATION

Shower, shave, dress and off to work. I feel great. The hike has cleared my lungs. Only my legs are a little tired. At the office I sense a slight redness on the undersides of my arms. I assume it's just abrasions from scrambling through the brush.

A suspicion creeps over me by late afternoon. The slight redness has spread on my arms. There's also a prickly sensation on my neck under my collar that is spreading into my scalp.

It's Monday and I go for my regular one-mile swim at the high school. Seventy-four laps later, I leave the pool and the redness on my arms has turned to raised, angry welts. Panic. I go home, eat and go to bed, trying not to think about the fact that I obviously have contacted poison oak.

DAY OF FIRST ITCH

Itching, red, hot welts keep me awake all night. It feels like a tropical sunburn and grape jelly on my arms. In the morning before the bathroom mirror I find that red leprosy is on my arms, neck, chest and face. It is particularly itchy in places where I sweat . . . my neck and the insides of my arm. I get to work, but I can't work.

Itchy distraction is an understatement. It's more like slow torture. I have to admit to my fellow workers that "yes, I have poison oak." I call Ken to see if he has it. He's not at home or work. Ken's probably in the hospital swollen like an overripe tomato.

I've never had a bad case of poison oak. My dad gets it so bad, I remember, that he needs cortisone shots. My worst fears are coming home to roost.

DAY OF HONEST AGONY

Another sleepless night. I get out of bed feeling like a creep. In the unflattering bathroom light I can see that the welts on my arms and neck have turned into a neighborhood of cute blisters. The itch is everywhere, irresistible. I go to work looking like pan-fried squid. Everyone says: "Don't scratch."

Dante went to hell and back in seven days. Will Steve Hellman be so lucky?

My fourth day since contact and I'm getting nowhere but worse. A neat line of welts has risen on my face where a branch of poison oak must have kissed my mug.

DAY OF SOCIAL OSTRACISM

Leaving the house after another sleepless night, I am in as good a mood as the lion that Francis Macomber wounded in Hemingway's tale of the luckless hero. I'm so mad I could eat Buick bumpers.

I haven't told a soul yet that the poison oak rash erupted on a most unfortunate place between my legs. I am pleading with life to throw me in front of a fast-moving semi.

Close encounters of the fourth kind. I am in a Carmel liquor store buying a pack of gum. I throw a quarter on the counter. The clerk, a young man of common-looking intelligence, reaches for my quarter. He stops, horrified at the sight of my arms. "Poison oak," he mutters, recoiling from me and my quarter. Reluctantly he picks up my quarter using a towel over his fingers.

I drag myself to the county office in Salinas. In the chambers of the Board of Supervisors, the other reporters sympathize, but appear relieved when I take a seat at the farthest end of the press desk. The Planning Commission is meeting on this day and a commissioner eyes me from his seat, notes my arms, and turns to whisper in the ear of another commissioner. My suffering is now social. No one will go to lunch with me. Everyone says it's contagious. I can't hide it under long sleeves because it's too uncomfortable.

At the laundromat that evening the cleaning lady walks by and in her Scottish brogue declares, "Aiye me God, E's gowt the oak."

DAY IN SEARCH OF A CURE

My fourth night without sleep. My neighborhood of blisters is now two-stories high, crawling with an irresistible itch like over-populated sections of Los Angeles. A cruel smog of resentment has soaked into my heart. I've been backed into the deepest corner of my soul where there is no place else to go. I decide to fight back.

At the office, I ask about cures. The boss's wife suggests Clorox and baking soda baths. "Dries it up," she says. I wince at the thought of something like washed sheets and angel food cake.

Smitty, our photographer, says, "I got it bad once and they dipped me in a vinegar bath." While I'm at it, I say, I might as well have my hips removed and pickled.

"Get a shot of cortisone," says a co-worker. But I've heard that cortisone is not good for your body, that it rots your bone marrow.

I go to the pharmacy for advice. The pharmacist gives a knowing nod of sympathy toward my arms, and plucks an ointment from his shelf. "This will relive your swelling and itching," he says. I apply it, and spend the day with greasy, itchy arms, wondering still; where is the cure?

Calamine lotion, somebody recommends. I go back to the pharmacist. He says he's got something more advanced than calamine. It's a bottle of green lotion. It goes on like calamine.

THE ARMS OF a poison oak victim show the welts that have blistered and started to heal. The welts form wherever the skin has been directly contacted by the plant, leaving well-defined areas like the straight and narrow wound on the arm (right). The victim also experienced large welts in the creases of his arms where sweating and stretching of the skin compounded the reaction to the poison oak. (Alan McEwen photo)

THE TRIPLE-LEAF pattern of the poison oak is one of the best ways to identify the plant. The plant's volatile oil is produced in resin ducts in the leaves, stems, roots, bark and flowers. A perennial plant, it loses its leaves in the fall, but the bare stems can still transmit the volatile oils onto clothing, animal fur or exposed skin. (Alan McEwen photo)

...and there is no known cure for it

By STEVE HELLMAN

POISON OAK RASH is so common that "a day doesn't go by that I don't see two or three cases of it," says Dr. Paul Tocchet of Carmel Valley.

The number of afflicted persons is high all year, but more so during months when outdoor activity increases, said Tocchet, who has practiced medicine in the Valley for 11 years.

Treatment varies according to the severity of the allergic reaction to the poison oak's volatile oil. If there is serious swelling, Tocchet said, anti-inflammation steroids like cortisone are used orally or intravenously.

For most cases, Tocchet recommends over-the-counter lotions that have a cooling, drying action on the skin. The reaction can also be treated by draining the blisters in a warm shower, swimming in the ocean, and by applying lotions such as tea poultices and external-use alcohol.

THE POISON OAK reaction usually takes 10 to 12 days to heal, Tocchet said.

Scratching the rash or blisters, contrary to widespread belief, does not spread the reaction, Tocchet said.

"After contact, the oil spreads through the body in the blood. The skin eruptions and itching rash are just the visible signs of what's going on inside the body," he said.

The reaction is prolonged by scratching if it irritates the skin or afflicted area, but the watery, clear pus in the blisters will not spread it, Tocchet said.

If the reaction spreads all over the body after contact, it is through the blood system, he said.

Why do some people react to the plant's oil more than others?

Tocchet explained that the reaction is a type of contact dermatitis or allergy that is built up in the body over a number of years.

"Some people have worse reactions with each contact, while others develop an immunity," he said.

The mental attitude toward the reaction also plays a part, he said. Telephone linemen and carpenters who repeatedly contact the plant in their work are not as bothered by it as individuals who are not used to coping with the reaction, Tocchet explained.

A preventative has not been developed because "no one really completely understands poison oak," he said.

POISON OAK'S BOTANICAL name is Rhus diversiloba. A member of the sumac family of plants, its eastern cousin is poison ivy. In the Rocky Mountains its counterpart is poison sumac.

Jerry Ranger, a forester with the state Department of Forestry office in Monterey, says poison oak is a perennial plant which loses its leaves in autumn.

"It grows as either a vine or a bush," Ranger noted. "The leaves are a greasy green color, growing in a triple leaf pattern. The leaves turn purple in fall before dropping."

The volatile oil in the plant can be transferred by contact with its leaves, bare stems, flowers, bark or roots. Airborne poison oak pollen or smoke from the burning plant can also cause reactions in human lungs, Ranger said.

Commonly found throughout California, poison oak is more prevalent in the coastal regions than in the mountains, Ranger said.

Locally, poison oak thrives under Monterey pine, redwoods and oak. The plant is hardy and will also grow in dry, hillside chaparral or in completely open spaces.

In his 15 years working as a forester, Ranger says he has not found poison oak to be any more potent during certain months of the year.

"The drought didn't affect it at all. It'll be more lush than ever after this year's rainfall," he said.

THE ODORLESS CLEAR OIL of the poison oak plant must be washed off the skin within five minutes of contact to avoid the skin reaction, according to Dr. Ronald Branson, an allergist in Monterey.

He recommends a soap and hot water bath if you've been outdoors and suspect contact with the plant. Washing your clothes will also help prevent spreading the oil onto other persons, or recontacting it later.

THIS ARSENAL OF REMEDIES is available at most pharmacies as over-the-counter lotions and creams to combat poison oak rash. One product includes a substance that will allegedly provide the user with an immunity to poison oak. Witch hazel, cider vinegar, baking soda and rubbing alcohol will help disinfect and dry a rash. The more exotic concoctions contain astringents to help dry the rash and camphor to give a soothing, cool feeling. A cream with .5 percent cortisone, previously available only with a doctor's prescription, is now obtainable over-the-counter. (Alan McEwen photo)

Another common source of contact, Branson said, is from cats and dogs that have collected the oils on their fur outdoors.

The skin reaction itself is not contagious, Branson assured. "The blisters do not contain the oil or the volatile element in the oil that causes the allergic reaction," he said.

The reaction will vary because of the different degrees of allergic conditions in individuals, he noted, adding that 80-90 percent of the population is allergic to poison oak.

"Babies are not born allergic to the plant," Branson pointed out. We never see infants up to a year old with allergic reactions to it."

The reason, he said, is that a person must build up the allergic capacity to poison oak. The general tendency in people is to become more allergic with each contact, Branson said, although some become less so.

"I can't walk in it," Branson said, "without getting a reaction, while others might get a red, itchy rash to the complete itching and swelling of the whole body that requires hospitalization."

THERE IS NO "CURE" for poison oak, he said. Some people think of cortisone as a cure, he noted, but he said the steroid only acts to dramatically reduce the swelling and itching. Cortisone does not rid the body of the volatile oil.

Branson cautioned that some individuals are allergic to the lotions and creams that are sold over-the-counter to combat the rash. He added that the preventatives or agents that are supposed to induce immunity have not been proven effective. Individuals have been known to contract a case of poison oak from use of the immunity agents.

Branson recommends lukewarm soda baths to dry the rash, and aspirin to relieve the itching.

"The best thing," he said, "is to stay away from the plant."

Carmel Work Center

It feels like calamine. It smells chalky like calamine. It's green calamine, I decide.

That night I spread liberal doses over my arms and neck. The green calamine is a new skin. For the first night I am able to sleep.

Day of Slight Relief

My bed is full of shredded green calamine, my arms and neck and other places are burning. In the bathroom I reapply liberal amounts of my savior lotion. I go to work looking like the re-make of a phantom from the green lagoon.

A hard, long swim that evening. The chlorinated, heated pool feels good. After a shower and toweling, I find that the blisters have moved out of the neighborhood on my arms. The welts are weeping, as the doctor tells me later. The wounds on my arms and neck begin to heal and dry. Again, before bed I apply quantum doses of the green calamine, and slip into slumber riding inside my air-tight, leopard-skin lotion.

DAY OF FELLOWSHIP

"You could have gotten it a lot worse," a friend tells me. "You cold have swollen up like my sister. Her face got so swollen they had to take her to the hospital. You're lucky."

I call Ken. He isn't home, but his roommate says Ken didn't get any poison oak. Somehow I hate Ken's guts, but I feel better knowing that he was saved from the experience.

I don't feel lucky so much as I feel just plain better. Like a guy on his last dollar at the Vegas craps table, I've rolled a pair of sevens after a long, luckless haul.

The itching remains, but the wounds on my arms are drying. I get a hug from a friend who isn't afraid to touch me. I go home that evening and take a warm shower and realize that warm water on a poison oak rash is one of the most delicious feelings attainable without years of meditation. The warm water seems to make the afflicted areas glow, the nerve endings jumping in a victorious joy, the tingling sensation casted down my spine.

In this case, the crime is worth the time.

DAY OF VISION

On my ninth day of this experience I have a vision. A friend has told me somewhere back in my agony that it would take nine days: three days of the rash to develop, three days of having it and three days of healing.

The wounds are healed. The itching has subsided into only a fiendish tickle. I am still whole. I am not ruined for life. I will be able to look in the mirror without wincing. I will go hiking again.

I realize: It was not that bad. It was just a lot of squawk about nothing.

That evening I am eating a quiet dinner when I drop one of my string beans. Picking it up, I notice that a slight red patch is showing on a new area of my arm.

Screaming into the night, like Edgar Allan Poe's tortured man of Usher, I am asked by someone inquiring about my delirium, "Did you remember to wash all your clothes and shoes and bedsheets? You've re-contacted it, my friend."

Debate continues on who will operate Rippling River

By STEVE HELLMAN

Legal and practical obstacles may prevent the County Housing Authority and a private, blue-ribbon committee from reaching an agreement to revive Rippling River, the "hotel for the handicapped" in Carmel Valley.

The Tri-County Steering Committee submitted a "work agreement" proposal in February to the Monterey County Housing Authority, owner and operator of the 150-unit residential complex. It is expected to be rejected on a number of legal grounds.

The housing authority, meanwhile, is proceeding with its remodeling of the facility located on Carmel Valley Road a half mile east of Carmel Valley Village.

The committee proposes to manage the facility, while the housing authority retains ownership and responsibility for maintenance.

The committee, comprised of doctors, counselors and handicapped persons, contends its expertise is needed to establish a complete transitional program for handicapped persons and a full occupancy at Rippling River.

The committee declared in a Jan. 28 letter to the housing authority: "Your mission in the county is limited to housing . . . (our) two groups can work together to serve the disabled."

SEBASTIAN BORDONARO, spokesman for the committee, said last week that the proposed "work agreement" is the "best of both worlds." He said, "The facility must meet the needs of the moderate and severely handicapped. The housing authority doesn't have the people-capability to do it."

Operation of the facility would rest entirely with the committee, while the housing authority retains ownership and proceeds with its plan to remodel the facility, he said.

In order to assume a direct-assistance role at the facility, Bordonaro said the committee "needs first the responsibility, and then the authority."

A work group comprised of Tri-County Steering Committee members, tenants and the housing authority would screen tenants, establish a rehabilitation program, provide attendant services and assess other needs at the facility. The proposed "work agreement" is for a term of 40 years.

Bruce Moore, executive director of the housing authority, said last week that it will not be possible to comply with all the desires of the committee.

He said that legal constraints prohibit management by others of a facility owned by the housing authority. Moore conceded that the committee has the contacts and experience to generate a good program at the facility, but he said the committee cannot expect to have a full managerial role.

"We must have authority where we have responsibility," Moore said. "Our commission is not willing to sign that (management) away."

Moore, who will present his analysis of the committee's "work agreement" to the housing authority commission at its March 31 meeting, said that the agency cannot legally make Rippling River available to all handicapped persons.

While the Tri-County Steering Committee maintains that the life of the facility depends on its being open to handicapped persons from all walks of life, Moore said, "It has to be for low-income people. We have very specific tenant requirements from the state."

A waiver would be contemplated, Moore acknowledged, only if the housing authority cannot market the facility to low-income handicapped persons.

He added, "We don't anticipate having any trouble filling it with tenants." Moore noted that since the housing authority took over management on Jan. 1, the number of tenants has increased from 30 to 40.

THE HOUSING AUTHORITY has asked the county Social Services Department to provide attendant care, Moore said. An agreement has been signed with the non-profit organization, Meals-on-Wheels, to assist with dining needs.

The Tri-County Steering Committee, as a non-profit organization with wide-ranging expertise, can also help the housing authority provide special services for the handicapped, Moore said.

> 'They (Tri-County Steering Committee) tend to see themselves with a larger daily role, and that's where I have problems with them.' — Bruce Moore, executive director of the county Housing Authority.

"They have the contacts with state and local agencies," he said.

"The relationship that I propose with the Tri-County Steering Committee is for them to come in and use our facility and our clientele," he said.

The housing authority, however, has already stated that it will not give up its management of the facility, Moore noted.

"They (the committee) tend to see themselves with a larger, daily role, and that's where I have problems with them," he said.

The housing authority has promised to operate the facility solely for low-income handicapped persons after it completes its $750,000 remodeling work.

THE 150 QUAD-TYPE units will be converted into 79 units for independent living. The conversion will also include remodeling the ramps, railings and doorways for handicapped persons in wheelchairs.

"The driveway out of the facility is too steep for wheelchairs. The residents are literally prisoners of the facility," Moore said, noting that is will cost $30,000 to install a ramp on the driveway.

"Doorways are too narrow; 20 units are accessible only by stairs. It's incredible that the place was built for handicapped," Moore said. "There aren't even fire sprinklers in the rooms."

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development assumed ownership by default in 1976, and has tried to sell Rippling River ever since.

The housing authority purchased the facility last year with a HUD loan, and planned to convert it into a low-income apartment complex. Its conversion plan was blocked, however, by the residents with the asistance of the Tri-County Steering Committee.

The county Planning Commission, responding to pleas that the conversion plan would force out the residents, denied the housing authority a use permit for the conversion.

The housing authority is proceeding with the conversion under the original use permit, which declares that the facility must be operated solely for the handicapped.

Disposal company offers free newspapers pickup

Customers of local disposal services in Carmel and Pebble Beach can have newspapers picked up at curbside for recycling at no extra charge starting Monday, March 31.

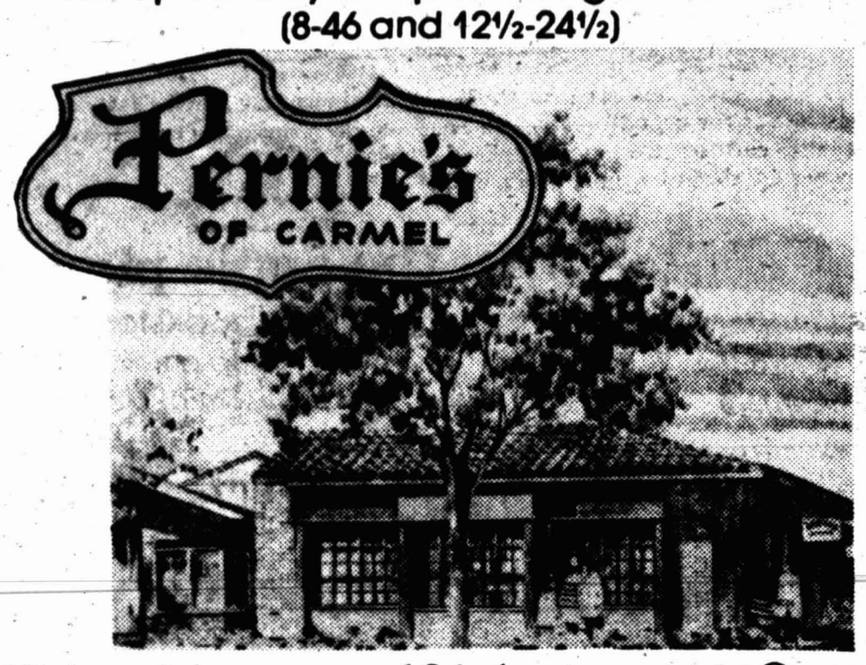

According to Tom Struck, an owner of the John Roscelli Corporation of Carmel and the Forest Disposal Service of Pebble Beach, labels announcing the service will be left on trash cans in those areas at the regular pick-up times this week.

Customers of the two companies will be asked to bundle and cross-tie their papers and leave them with their cans each week. Struck emphasized that the only extra equipment required by his companies will be racks for the garbage trucks. Because of this, he expects the newspaper pickup to be profitable for the company and provide community service as well. "There is a good market for paper now," Struck said, "and volume will make it work."

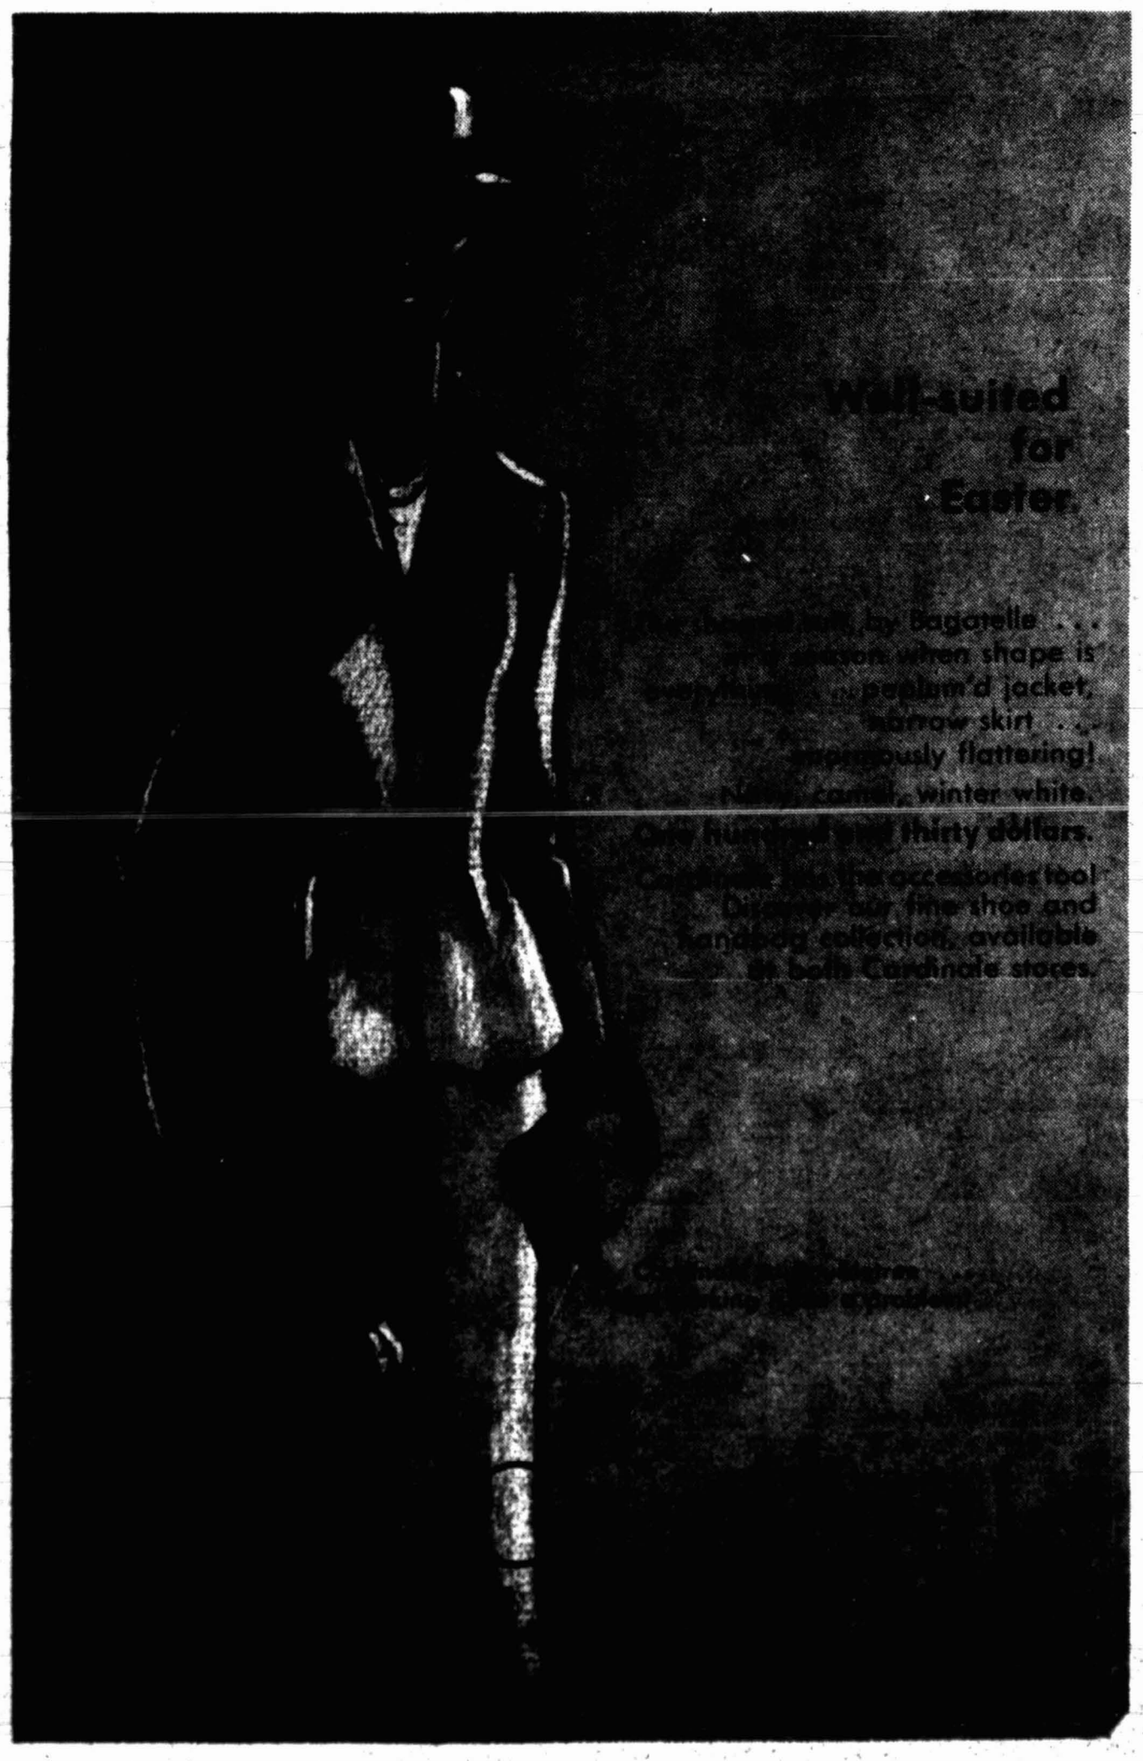

The project has been in the planning stages for a year and a half, Struck said. The idea began with the successful experience of one of his partners, Jim Carroll, with a similar program in Santa Rosa.

The company hopes to be able to extend the service to Carmel Valley within a couple of weeks. They are willing to help schools, churches, Scout groups and any other organizations that want to make money by collecting newspapers for recyling.

SO THE "GOUGING landlord" isn't? He's not only a nice guy, but maybe now you feel sorry for him, now that the facts have been revealed.

This is a prime example of hysteria based on fiction. Protest, picket, scream, berate and prepare "emergency" laws to be enacted to "stem the tide of greed."

The whole thing is disgusting. Moreover, there isn't one tenant in the world that doesn't know just when his lease is up. It never comes as a surprise.

Frankly, I think there is too much of an element here in Carmel that just likes to make trouble. Not maybe for the fun of it, but to serve their own ends.

Perhaps there truly are a few "gouging landlords," but it seems, that when the full stories unfold, there really are more that are concerned and responsible.

Funny, isn't it? It's sort of like news about kids. Only the few bad ones hit the headlines — and all the good ones get judged in the same light.

ON A TRIP TO the nursery this week to get some new bedding plants I discovered a pot of forsythia which some lady snatched from under my nose, almost the second that I spotted it.

Shades of Eastern spring! Sure, we have broom (which makes almost everyone's nose twitch), and they are members of the same family, but the bigger yellow blossoms of forsythia are just plain spring-ier.

Then I went back in the memories picture album, and the snow was still on the ground, the trees were naked of leaves and stark-fingered against the sky, and the corner of the garden that I could see from my childhood bedroom window was where I looked for the arrival of spring. To me, ground hogs or not, March 21st or not, spring was only truly a happening when the yellow forsythia bushes came bursting forth.

The next event was the miracle of the pussy willows. It was, and still is to me, the most amazing thing that a bare stick can become so soft and cuddly.

To my Mother, spring was heralded by the daffodils, with their trumpet heads on tall, soldier-erect stems. She had small battalions of them spaced about the yard. And then her lilacs bloomed, always in the days of rain. She would go out and cut them and bring them, covered with raindrops, into the kitchen and shake them over the sink. They looked like lavender dogs shaking themselves after a bath.

Her flowers were always in the house. We'd pass a table and the lilac would cover that corner of the room with its fragrance. Her tulips, daffodils and iris brightened every part of the house, and we were apt to find some tiny vase or little girl's tea cup tucked into a space between books on the shelves, or in the bathroom, yellow, or pink, or blue and white with blossoms. She brightened every corner where she was.

I like the old fashioned bouquets, full of all the colors, shapes and scents — there are several gardens in Carmel that I always enjoy going past, as they are just like that, an old fashioned bouquet, and they brighten the whole block. Nice, nice, nice.

OF COURSE YOU realize several things about the election. If Howard Brunn is elected mayor, he has promised to appoint the third highest vote getter in the council race to fill his seat. That means if you vote for Brunn, you may get three council member (old and/or new).

If you vote for Mike Brown for mayor, you will get two council members and another appointee. Interesting to speculate just whom it might be — Les Gross? June Wood? Beverly Goldberg? Or maybe even Gunnar Norberg?

HUMMM — If Brown were mayor, and Jim Wright won one seat, and Brown makes his appointment — we'd be right back where we've been for the last two years!

DON'T FORGET tonight's Citizens Committee Candidates Night at the Women's Club, and Sunday afternoon at Sunset's Room 20 is the Common Sense Committee Town Meeting. That's the one addressing second kitchens — low-income housing — and transient rentals.

These afternoon sessions were planned so that all of you who don't like going out at night can participate in these forums also. A fine idea.

At Belles and Beaus 7 to 14 Shop we have as our motto "Thank Heaven For Little Girls" (and big girls too).

Our only difficulty is when we must convince a customer that she is not yet ready for pre-teen sizes. She wants to be but her figure is not ready. However they soon learn that we have merchandise suitable for them — "a grown-up look" but in regular sizes — and they are pleased.

The Feminine Look is returning for girls in the 7 to 14 sizes. The trend started in New York some months ago and has finally reached the West Coast. At Belles and Beaus we have recently sold more dresses than in past years. However jeans and slacks must have their place in a girl's wardrobe — we stock many "makes" in regulars and slims.

Florence Eiseman, famous for designing girls wear, realizes that girls who wear sizes 10-12 & 14 no longer want flower appliques on their dresses. For this reason she is clever in designing dresses in beautiful fabrics for girls in that age group. We cannot keep enough of them in stock. Many other "makes" are in stock and French imports are also popular.

The owner of Belles and Beaus realizes that girls who have just outgrown the 6x size cannot wear a style suitable for 10-12 & 14 girls. We therefore buy separately for the 7 and 8 sizes — styles that have a younger "look."

We know how to coordinate clothing so mothers can actually cut their budget by shopping at Belles and Beaus. We stock all items necessary for a girl's wardrobe.

Our pre-school catalogue goes in the mail in July. It is printed in full color in New York and is mailed to all parts of the United States. Mail orders are important and are carefully filled.

THE CARMEL CRAFT Studios on San Carlos near Ocean will remain largely intact, with each shopkeeper to have a separate lease with landlord Toland Doud. Tenants at the craft center currently rent from leaseholder Fred Klepich on a month-to-month basis. (Alan McEwen photo)

ROCKY STEVENS, who has been the Studio Art Supplies framer for over 20 years, will be retiring at the end of the month. Fred Klepich, owner of the art supply store and president of Carmel Craft Studios, says it will be the "end of an era" for the craft center as well.

Carmel Craft Studios won't close

NEARLY ALL THE TENANTS in the Carmel Craft Studios will be able to remain at the San Carlos and Ocean Avenue complex.

The owners of each shop — the Carmel Work Center, the Carmel Handbag Company, Studio 7 jewelry, Ivory Works, Paolina's Restaurant and Studio Art Supplies — will have individual leases with landlord Toland Doud for $1.50 per square foot per month.

The leases will be drawn for five years, with two five-year options to renew.

Doud will pay all property taxes and insurance.

JOHN CALDER'S Hand-Blown Glass shop may have to close because of the higher rent, according to the owner. Calder was paying $100 — or about 75 cents a square foot — per month.

Fred Klepich, president of the Carmel Craft Studios and owner of Studio Art Supplies, said he will continue his business "even though what it boils down to is the end of an era."

Klepich has had a lease on the complex for 25 years at $650 per month — about nine cents a square foot per month. He rented space to craftsmen on a month-to-month basis.

Klepich said he collected "between $2,200 and $2,500" a month in rent from the other tenants, and was responsible for upkeep and repairs to the former metal shop building. He told the Pine Cone that he spent "up to $1,000 per month" on upkeep and repairs. He thus was able to clear a profit of $600-$850 or more per month and operate his own shops rent-free.

About 1,100 square feet of the 7,200-square-foot building are used as common entrance and walkway area.

THE MAJORITY OF THE tenants are pleased about the new arrangement.

"We're very happy the property is being returned to Dr. Doud's control," Tim Swift, owner of Studio 7 jewelry, told the Pine Cone. "He (Doud) is a very fair and very reasonable man. We're happy about getting a lease. We've been waiting to do further improvements to our space until we got a lease."

Vielle said he was impressed by the openness and sincerity of Doud. "He's been here a long time. He's obviously interested in continuing the tradition of crafts in the building and in the village," Vielle said.

Schafer said his rent will be less under the new arrangement. "I'm paying about $2 a square foot now," he said, "and I have no lease."

Schafer said he plans to spend about $20,000 in improvements in his space.

Fritzie Bonenberger, who with her husband, Wes, owns the Carmel Work Center, told the Pine Cone Tuesday that they have negotiated with Doud to lease a 400-square-foot stall at the back of the center. Their current space on San Carlos comprises 650 square feet. "It sounds just great," she said. "We're pleased to be working with Dr. Doud and the other tenants on refurbishing (the Carmel Craft Studios). The sun is beginning to shine through."

DOUD'S ATTORNEY, Richard Wilsdon, said that the new leases will call for some tenant-paid improvements to the buildings. Wilsdon said that the dollar amount of improvements would be "determined on a case-by-case basis."

Klepich said he "can't understand the part about improvements." He said he was afraid that the leases could call for improvements of up to $20,000. "That would be no bargain, even with the $1.50 a square foot rent," he said.

Klepich's Studio Art Supplies occupies about 1,200 square feet. He said that to pay the rent — $1,800 per month — he "may have to expand the gallery part" of his business. Klepich said that the art supply part is not as profitable as the gallery portion.

He owns the only art supply store in Carmel.

Klepich said he "didn't get a thing" out of the meeting.

"It's discouraging," Klepich said, "I didn't come out of the meeting with anything more than I went in with. Nothing changed. I'll just have to operate as Studio Art Supplies and what they want to do with the rest of the building is their concern. There's nothing I can do. I know they (the tenants) want leases. But nobody has been kicked out of here in 25 years."

Wilsdon said at the meeting that Doud "intends to use his own money to clean up and remodel the exterior" of the building.

FRED KLEPICH SAYS he will continue to operate his Studio Art Supplies shop in the Carmel Craft Studios. Klepich's 25-year lease on the craft center complex expires March 31. He, like other tenants in the building, intends to sign a new lease with landlord Toland Doud.

ELIZABETH F. MORTON

Former Carmel resident Elizabeth Fawcett Morton died March 9 in Old Remy, Okla., after a long illness. She was 85.

Born in 1894 in Philadelphia, she came to Carmel in 1954 and moved away a year and a half ago. Her husband, Clarence Edward Fawcett, died in 1961.

She was a member of the Monterey Peninsula Friends Meeting, and she was an active square, folk and ballroom dancer until about four years ago.

She is survived by twin daughters, Betsy Watson of Old Remy and Marion Sanderson of New Jersey, and a grandson.

Debate rages on erosion control

CALIFORNIA-AMERICAN Water Company has again cited a 1978 Carmel Valley vegetation study that absolves the utility of any blame for erosion along the Carmel River caused by over-pumping of wells.

Cal-Am General Manager Richard Sullivan said earlier this month that the correlation between well-pumping and death of riverbank vegetation was "thoroughly discussed" in the study prepared by CH2M Hill Inc. of San Jose.

Although the CH2M Hill study acknowledged that well-pumping can kill vegetation by lowering the water table, it declared that vegetation was found to be "ineffective" for controlling erosion.

The independent study, which drew strong criticism from residents and one local water expert, concluded that "damage to riparian vegetation has not enhanced bank erosion problems in the Valley."

It blamed downcutting of the river, natural meandering of the river's course and periodic high flows for riverbank erosion. It also cited sand and gravel dredging as contributing to the "scouring action" of the river against its banks.

WILLIAM T. O'LEARY, project engineer for the study, claims that "too much emphasis" is placed on vegetation's role in bank stability. He recommends against mitigation measures to enhance vegetation, including the installation of sprinklers for irrigation.

The study was required by the county Board of Supervisors when Cal-Am applied for a use permit in 1977 to drill three wells into the aquifer that lies beneath the Carmel River. Cal-Am is currently applying for a use permit to drill four additional wells and construct an iron removal plant.

The three wells drilled after 1977 are located along the Carmel River between Garland Ranch Regional Park and a point opposite Scarlett Road.

Cal-Am wants to drill four more wells to depths between 50 and 90 feet. Two wells would be located at the end of Cypress Lane, a third well would go in near Rancho San Carlos Road and a fourth on the Rancho Canada golf course.

Sullivan said of the CH2M Hill study, which cost Cal-Am $10,000: "We have no reason to disagree with it. It (the study) speaks for itself."

•

EDWIN LEE OF CARMEL has emphatically disagreed with the CH2M Hill study, maintaining that vegetation helps anchor the riverbanks and prevents erosion.

Lee, a former member of the Zone 11 Advisory Committee, is a University of Washington graduate in physics and engineering.

His criticism of the CH2M Hill study is included in the lengthy written comments that he submitted on the draft Environmental Impact Report for Cal-Am's proposed four wells.

Charging that the draft EIR has "greviously understated" the depth and extent of drawdown due to Cal-Am wells, Lee states: "Willows and cottonwoods in particular may be subject to increased stress and may fail to survive if the project is implemented."

THE DRAFT EIR acknowledges that cottonwoods in some areas will "probably be totally eliminated during pumping of proposed wells." It recommends that irrigation water be pumped to the riparian areas near the wells.

Lee states that the EIR should go further in its recommendations to protect riparian vegetation. He maintains that contrary to the CH2M Hill study, riparian vegetation is the key to the riverbank protection.

"Enhanced erosion potential, due to the project (four wells) can only be mitigated by irrigation to preserve the vegetation on the bank or by rip-rap (boulders and stone) or other structural means," Lee declares.

THE CH2M HILL STUDY claims that "vegetation was found to be ineffective for controlling erosion of the unconsolidated sand banks along the Carmel River. Bank erosion was found to be occurring even in areas where lush vegetation is growing."

Lee maintains in his lengthy comments on the EIR that the areas of the riverbank that have lost riparian vegetation are consistently adjacent to Cal-Am wells. In a series of photographs, Lee documents major erosion at:

- Meadows Road in 1978, about 1,600 feet below the Cal-Am's Schulte well. "This is the site of major erosion at the Schulte Road bridge," Lee notes.
- The sites along the river near the Begonia well. Severe bank erosion was noted in this area by the CH2M Hill study, and the area was the worst hit by erosion this February.

- Land adjacent to the Berwick wells eroded severely in the major 1969 flood; this was followed by more erosion in the lesser 1978 flood.

THE CH2M HILL STUDY states that "long-term downcutting of the Carmel River was found to be the major cause of the bank erosion."

It is only a theory, however, that a drop in the river bottom is the major cause of erosion, Lee maintains, a theory that he states "is not substantiated by fact. At the Schulte Road bridge, where major erosion has occurred, no downcutting is indicated by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' measurements in 1966 and 1975."

In contrast, Lee continues, at the Valley Greens Drive bridge, the Corps' measurements indicate downcutting to the extent of three feet. "No erosion," he states, "occurred in 1978 as indicated in the CH2M Hill report.

The evidence clearly indicates that the presence or absence of healthy willows on the river bank is far more important in determining whether erosion will occur than is the presence or absence of downcutting of the river bed, Lee concludes.

Respond to letter criticizing school

Parents, teachers, students rally to support of Carmel High

By STEVE HELLMAN

A BROAD-BASED DEFENSE of Carmel High School rallied forth at the March 25 meeting of the Board of Education of the Carmel Unified School District.

A standing-room-only crowd of parents, teachers and students jammed into the meeting in response to criticism of the high school in a newsstory that appeared in the Pine Cone (March 20). The article was about a letter signed by eight disgruntled parents who severely criticized the administration, educational atmosphere and student conduct at the high school campus.

A score of students decried the "negativism" of the letter, and declared Carmel High School to be a "positive place" and their first choice for a quality education.

Administrators and trustees called for an end to antagonism between the school district and parents that has developed since Proposition 13. They urged parents to help in forging the best possible education for their children in "an increasingly difficult world."

'It's time to stop the negative. It's time to move onward. We'll have one great high school if everyone works for it.' — School Board President Ken White.

•

TEACHER RICHARD FLETCHER, who had been singled out by the eight women for allowing students to discuss frank sexual questions in his health class, defended himself, the students and the high school.

Greeted by an outburst of applause from students, Fletcher said, "We're in the business of education, which comes from the Latin root, to draw out of, not cram into."

The curriculum he used was approved in Orange County "so I figured I couldn't go wrong with it here," Fletcher said.

While the uproar last year over his "sex questionnaire" led to a moratorium on family life education in the Carmel schools, Fletcher explained in detail how the questionnaire was taken from a list of student questions and was used only as a discussion tool.

"No one had to answer the questions," Fletcher said. "It was a lesson in how males and females relate to one another, and the differences. The students weren't uncomfortable with it." He added that not one single community member came to him to ask what he was doing with the questionnaire after it was distributed clandestinely to parents.

FLETCHER'S QUESTIONNAIRE was only one of several specific instances that the eight women had cited in their letter to the trustees as examples of "lack of discipline," poor student behavior and low academic achievement at the high school.

"Everything in the letter was negative," countered junior Lynn Lazzarini. "The people who wrote the letter are entitled to their view, but they should bring out the positive.

"Carmel High School," Lazzarini insisted, "has a good atmosphere for learning. There are students who want to learn."

She added that Fletcher's class was widely acclaimed by students as "a real benefit to everyone because it helped us with real life problems."

Paige Thomson, a junior, said the parents' letter did not recognize improvements that have been made at the high school "with the help of students and the administration. Students feel good about the attitude at Carmel High School."

Another junior, Duffy Carolan, said that parents should "start at home" to solve their children's problems instead of attacking the high school.

Bruce Lathrop, the student representative to the school board, criticized the Pine Cone article for being "negative."

"There is so much that is positive. Every student you ask would rather go to this high school than any other public school," Lathrop said.

DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT Dr. Carl Wilsey said all high schools have similar problems with student morale, attendance and discipline, but he added that "Carmel High School has fewer (problems) than most."

The program cuts that have been forced in the public schools by Proposition 13 weakened teacher and student morale, and "a trend has developed in our school district and other districts in the state for a conflict between parents and staff," Wilsey said.

Wilsey called for parents and the school district to "work cooperatively to solve our problems," adding that "we have to do it in this setting or else we have to question our democratic process."

Carmel High School Principal Dan Stevenson exhorted parents to "pull with us and not against us." He noted that 14 committees have been formed, with 25 parents involved in answering the problems at the high school.

Lauding the staff and the students at Carmel High School, Stevenson pointed out that administrators at Larkspur and Tamalpaias high schools have asked to come here to examine "how we maintain quality education in the face of declining enrollment and financial resources."

Trustee Doyle Clayton, attacking the Pine Cone article and parents' letters as "negative," said, "The positive is there for students who want to seek it out."

Clayton cautioned parents "who are seeking instant success from the new school board" that "a lot of people are looking at their public schools to solve their family problems, but hey, we're just not going to do it."

Veteran trustee Frances Gaver said that during her six years on the school board the high school curriculum has improved and the Regional Occupation Program has been added.

'Parents and the school district have to work cooperatively to solve our problems. We have to do it in this setting or else we have to question our democratic process.' — District Superintendent Dr. Carl Wilsey.

"My children," Gaver insisted, "had a good education at Carmel High School, were accepted at good colleges and went on to be successful.

"It pains me," Gaver said, "to hear some of the critical comments that are floating around."

Trustee Ron Parravano said, "A certain amount of criticism is healthy." But he insisted that the parents who signed the letter should have "given the trustees a chance first before going public with your concerns."

"It's time to stop the negative," Board President Ken White said. "It's time to move onward. We'll have one great high school if everyone works for it."

Trustee Barbara Sanford declined to comment. She is a former member of the group who first submitted its complaints to Wilsey last year; the same group that signed the letter this year complaining that Wilsey had not responded to its concerns.

Several of these parents were present at the March 25 meeting, but none made any comment on the Pine Cone article, the students' responses or their letter.

Carmel High students earn while they learn

STUDENTS WHO ENROLL in the Regional Occupation Program (ROP) at Carmel High School learn a vocation while they earn school credit.

They also receive wages in some of the 18 ROP courses available at high schools throughout Monterey County.

Learning how to find a job, hold a job and understand the particular facets of a career are the cornerposts of ROP.

Whether a student is college-bound and needs some work experience for a part-time job, or is set on entering a specific job field out of high school, ROP courses can lend valuable experience.

For an employer who hires a student in ROP, it can mean a 50 percent tax deduction on the student's wages.

The main purpose of the program, according to Chuck Phillips, ROP coordinator at Carmel High School, is to provide high school students with specialized entry-level training which can be a jumping-off point to employment or advanced technical training after graduation.

"ROP can be the initial real-life exposure to the world of work under actual working conditions," Phillips said.

"It has proven invaluable for those students who may never have set foot in or talked personally with a worker from a bank, a warehouse, a print shop or a hospital," he said.

Most popular ROP course at Carmel High School is Hotel-Motel Occupations, Phillips said. One of four ROP courses offered at Carmel, it has a particular draw because of the many hospitable businesses in this area, he added.

"Students actually go to work for hotels and restaurants," Phillips said. A training agreement is signed with the employer, and the student is paid minimum wage as a regular employee.

The student must first find a job before enrolling in the Hotel-Motel Occupations course, Phillips explained. "We do not place students, nor do we answer requests from employers for specific kinds of students to fill a job."

A STUDENT MAY LEARN housekeeping, maid service, how to be a bellman, a bookkeeper, night auditor, front desk operator, waiter or chef. The course, like all ROP classes, is divided between on-the-job training and classroom instruction.

Classroom time covers 35 hours of instruction in: How to get along with other employees; behavior on the job; when to ask for a raise; procedures for promotion through the ranks, and career opportunities.

Phillips declared: "We use community resources for the teaching."

Carmel establishments that are employing ROP students in the Hotel-Motel Occupations course include La Playa Hotel, General Store, Le Bistro and the Torres Inn, Phillips said.

There are 33 students in the Motel-Hotel Occupations course this year. In past years almost every student has "placed in a job" after completing the course, Phillips said.

It is a state requirement that 50 percent of the ROP students place in a job upon completion of the program, Phillips noted, or progress to advanced career training at Monterey Peninsula College.

THE ROP ENROLLMENT AT Carmel High School has been growing since the school joined the county-wide program in 1976, Phillips said. There are currently 127 Carmel students in ROP courses. Ninety-five are enrolled in the four courses at Carmel High School: Agri-Business, Forestry Firefighting, Parks and Rural Recreation and the Hotel-Motel Occupations.

Courses on other campuses include dental assisting, construction technology, banking careers, auto service and maintenance, and multi-media graphics. ROP courses are also offered in retail merchandising, radio and television production, floristry and careers in childcare.

Transportation is provided for Carmel High School students who attend ROP courses on other campuses. ROP courses are free of charge to students.

The Parks and Rural Recreation class is all laboratory, Phillips noted. Students are taught trail building and park maintenance by the Carmel city forester. Other teachers complete the training so that a student is assured of entry-level skills as a park aide.

Retail merchandising includes a laboratory class for six months. A student then works with an employer, but not on a paid basis, Phillips explained. The student will move from task to task through several positions for a retail employer, learning how to order and stock goods and how to operate a cash register.

"But the student never assumes a productive role in the business, and is not paid," Phillips said.

When the student receives wages from an employer, the employer can claim tax credits up to $4,500, Phillips said. The businessman also is eligible for credits for 50 percent of the student's wages in the first year.

WHILE PHILLIPS MUST maintain a 50 peroent placement rate for students, he noted that the ROP courses are open-ended.

A student can enter or leave the course at any time during the year without fear of penalty.

ROP is state-funded, and has been in operation in Monterey County since 1969. Carmel High School was the last school in the county to join ROP, Phillips noted. Carmel started offering ROP classes in 1976.

"It's value was quickly realized when employers reached a point where they wanted people with training," said Phillips, who worked eight years in Europe as a civilian job trainer for the U.S. Army. He also served as an administrative analyst at the University of California at Los Angeles, where he did research on vocational education.

ROP instructors are Carmel Unified School District teachers who have either a special credential or training experience in a vocational field and business professionals who work for ROP as part-time teachers.

ROP IS COST-EFFECTIVE, Phillips noted, since it utilizes community resources surrounding many high school campuses. Phillips added, "We could do all the training in the lab, but the cost would be too high for a model room and all the right appliances and fixtures."

Funding for ROP may be affected by the Jarvis II initiative (Proposition 9) on the June 3 ballot. The measure to cut state income taxes in half, if passed by voters, could affect ROP since it is funded solely by the state, Phillips said. He added that it has not been determined how deep the cuts would be in ROP if Proposition 9 passes.

Phillips said that he hopes to add three new courses at Carmel High School:

- A maintenance repair course for homes, condominiums and motels and hotels. This course would be designed for students who want to go into janitorial or custodial work for the increasing number of new residences being built in the Carmel area.
- A fashion design course to employ students in local retail clothing stores. Phillips noted that the course would focus on the buying, marketing and displaying of clothing for a retail shop.
- A small business operation course to train students who want to start their own businesses. Phillips said that there are many young people who are starting their own small businesses. The course would teach business practices, how to obtain a license, insurance needs and acccounting.

Run for Fun(d$) open to all ages

Everyone from grandmothers and grandfathers to babies in strollers is welcome to join the Run For Fun(d$), a foot race to benefit Carmel High School on Sunday, April 13.

A fun run and a four-mile race will begin at 10 a.m. at the Carmel High School track and continue down the hill to the beach where the fun runners will catch their breath and prepare for a community barbecue. More experienced joggers will take a left on Scenic Road and continue to Carmel Point before returning to the beach.

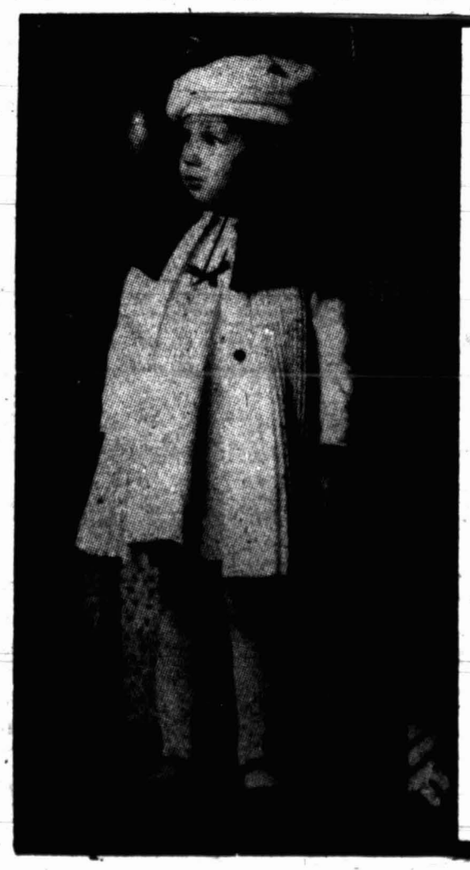

Everyone attending the picnic is asked to bring his own food and drink. Barbecues will be available for cooking.

The cost to enter the race is $2 if registered by April 4 or $3 after April 4. Race day registration continues from 8-9:45 a.m. at the high school. Race entry forms are available at Carmel High School or the Carmel Pine Cone office, located at San Carlos and Ocean, Carmel.

Official race T-shirts emblazoned with the image of a jogging padre may be purchased at the high school student store from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. Monday through Friday and on race day for $5 each.

Sponsors of the event are the Carmel Pine Cone, Don Lucas Ford, dentists Robert Auger, Gerald Tarsitano and John Faia III, Rudy-Harris, Ltd., Dick Bruhn, F.O.C.U.S. and Brinton's.

Mission Trail Park to bloom forth with native plants

NATIVE PLANTS SUCH as this bush monkey flower (Mimulus aurantiacus) will be planted in Mission Trail Park by the Native Plant Society and the Carmel Public Works Department. The plants will commemorate the life of Gertrude Ellen Lester Rowntree, a Carmel resident from 1925 until her recent death. She wrote a number of books on native plants, including Hardy Californians, to be reprinted and issued this spring.

NO IRRIGATION SYSTEM will be required for the new drought-resistant plants to go in Mission Trail Park. The City Council approved a proposal by Cedric Rowntree, son of Gertrude Ellen Lester Rowntree, to have the Native Plant Society and the city forester collaborate on planting and labeling the new shrubs.

Liquor license issue may go to the voters

Last week McComb filed a notice of intention to circulate a petition.

To put the initiative on the Nov. 4 general election ballot, McComb must obtain the signatures of 522 (15 percent) of the 3,480 registered voters in Carmel, according to Monterey County Assistant Registrar of Voters Ross Underwood. Deadline for submission of initiatives for the June 3 primary election was March 21.

The issue could be placed before Carmel voters earlier than Nov. 4 if the City Council declares a special election.

McCOMB TOLD THE Pine Cone last week that he "will have absolutely no problem" in obtaining the 522 valid signatures.

"I've talked with hundreds of people about it, including my neighbors, and so far only one resident has been against my obtaining a hard liquor license," he said.

Under election statutes, McComb will be able to start circulating his petition on Friday, April 11, 21 days after the official public notice is posted.

McComb claims that he should be allowed a liquor license because a previous restaurant owner at his location had one eight years ago. In 1979 alcohol sales were prohibited in all zones except C-1-C. The Hacienda has been in the C-1-S zone since 1925.

McComb went before the Carmel Planning Commission Feb. 13 with a proposal to buy the Village Tavern on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth and move its liquor license to the Hacienda located on Dolores near Fifth.

The commissioners informed McComb that they cannot grant variances to zoning ordinances, and that he would have to obtain a rezoning to obtain the license.

McCOMB APPEARED BEFORE the City Council March 3 and stated that when he established the restaurant in 1978 he was informed that he could get a license. He promised that he would be "discreet" in his liquor sales. "I have a residentially oriented, family type restaurant," he said. "I don't want to jeopardize my local business by bringing in the wrong kind of customers."

Councilman Helen Arnold told McComb not to get "false hopes" of obtaining a license. She said she would vote against any zoning measure that could effectively increase the number of liquor licenses in the village. He was told by the council to refer the matter to the Planning Commission.

McComb said that after the council meeting he and his attorney decided to try to put the issue before the voters.

A letter to the Residents of Carmel from Alan Williams, Candidate for Carmel City Council

Dear Voter:

In less than two weeks you will be going to the polls to vote for the people who will be leading your city.

I would like to be one of those leaders. I want you to know me and what you can expect.

This Thursday is the third of four Public Forums. I urge you to attend. I am confident that after you hear what I have to say, I will earn your vote.

I hope to see you at one or more of these forums. It's better to choose the right people now than to live with the wrong people for the next four years.

Sincerely,

Alan Williams

Alan Williams

P.S.: I would like to thank the Common Sense Committee and the Carmel Citizens Committee for bringing the candidates together.

Carmel schools to drop national test program

THE COMPREHENSIVE TEST of Basic Skills, which ranked students here with students throughout the country, has been abandoned by the Carmel Unified School District.

The Board of Education, at its March 11 meeting decided to discontinue the achievement testing program on the advice of Richard Hawkins, director of pupil personnel services.

Hawkins told the trustees that the CTBS program is time-consuming, provides insufficient information and is not matched with the curriculum taught in the Carmel schools.

The CTBS provided the district its only means of measuring student progress against a national average, but Hawkins insisted that the district can accumulate accurate information from its other testing programs. He added that discontinuing the CTBS will save the district approximately $1,500 to $1,700 per year.

"Time and time again," Hawkins said, "teachers say that the CTBS tests do not pertain to what they're teaching. We have to really question the ingredients of those tests."

The CTBS, for example, might test fourth grade students on fractions, while the Carmel schools do not teach fractions until the fifth grade, Hawkins explained.

RESULTS FROM THE CTBS tests, which are utilized in grades K-5 and 8, have shown that the students in the eighth grade here scored on the average of tenth grade levels nationally.

Ranking according to grade levels only, however, has limited value, Hawkins explained. "Grade level is a nebulous concept. There is no such thingas a specific grade level functioning."

He added that the CTBS scores have remained constant for five years without indicating any significant changes in a student's progress. He said that the CTBS tests simply do not provide an evaluation of programs in the Carmel schools.

Curriculum-oriented tests that are administered by teachers and the California Assessment Program (CAP) provide enough adequate data for the district to track student progress, Hawkins said.

The CAP tests also provide a district-wide assessment of reading, language and mathematics at grades 3, 6 and 12. The CAP tests do not provide direct rankings for individual students, or a measure against national norms, but they do indicate how well a specific grade or school is doing compared to other districts throughout the state.

"A thorough, comprehensive, curriculum-referenced process goes into the CAP tests," Hawkins said. The district also has direct access to formulating the CAP tests.

"THE INFORMATION (from the CAP tests) is much more useful. It tells us how we rank against other schools," Hawkins said.

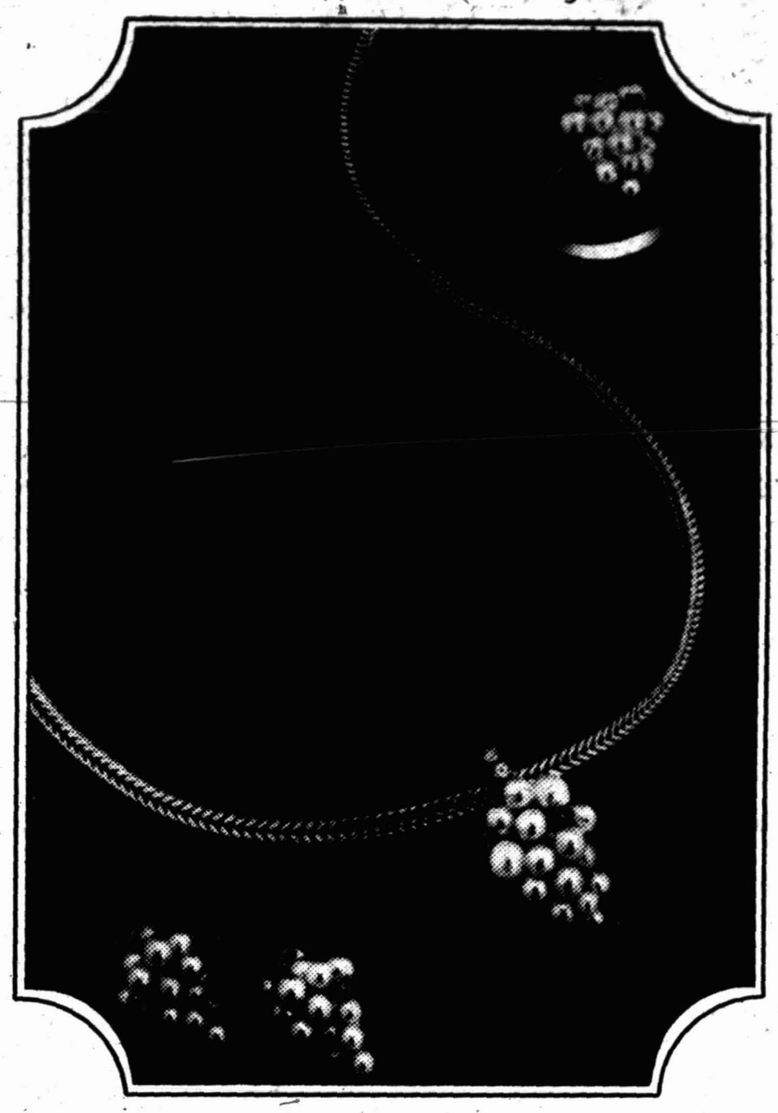

The CAP tests are also less time-consuming because students are not asked the same set of question as in the CTBS. The testing is done on a matrix that provides analysis of the district's curriculum in the three school levels, although it precludes making comparisons of individual students.

The district will also continue to rely on departmental tests, teacher-made tests for specific courses, comprehensive individual assessments by Hawkins' office, and locally developed tests based on local curriculum.

Hawkins said: "If you want to put a number on kids, then we can go back to the CTBS. But it still won't show where a student compares to students across the nation who will be entering college at the same time."

PADRE SPORTS

By MARK SANFORD

THE VARSITY BASEBALL TEAM came out of its shell and won the Gonzales baseball tournament after tying and losing its first two games.

Carmel opened the season with a 7-7 tie with Monterey on the Padre diamond. The Padres then lost to Santa Cruz 3-2.

The Padres won three straight in the tournament. They defeated North Salinas 6-4, 9-1 and Palma 9-6.

THE GOLF TEAM SHOWED it was something to be reckoned with by winning a tournament with 17 of the best teams in the Central Coast Section before splitting its next two matches.

In the tournament, John Pirotte led the scoring with a 69. Curtis Jones had a 73, and Pat Parrish and Andrew Whitacre followed with 76s for a 294 total.

THE CARMEL HIGH GIRLS softball team is loooking forward to league play and a good season with quite a few returnees.

Also returning are Karen Edmonds, Linda Fleager, Tricia, Diana McKenzie and Jenifer Thompson, who are all juniors.

THE TENNIS TEAM WON its first two matches convincingly, 7-0 over Santa Cruz and 5-2 against Aptos.

HELP

BIG SUR, CA. 93920

This ad is sponsored by THE FRIENDS OF THE BIG SUR COAST, a new organization established to fight the threats of increased federal intervention

THREAT No. 1
S2233: Cranston's Bill would give the Forest Service unlimited authority to acquire land around Los Padres Forest and instruct the Secretary of Agriculture to set new forest boundaries as land is acquired.

This would allow the Forest Service to begin creating a checkerboard pattern of federal holdings, and then move the forest boundaries to the outside of the checkerboard, making all private lands inholdings.

THREAT NO. 2
Ansel Adams' Proposal for a National Scenic Area would provide government control of the Big Sur Coast from Malpaso Creek to the southern boundary of the Hearst Ranch.

Despite Mr. Adams' good intentions, this would turn Big Sur's private lands into inholdings, would destroy a unique and creative lifestyle, and burden the entire Peninsula and Coastal area with excessive tourist impacts.

THREAT NO. 3
The Wilderness Society's proposal for a National Scenic Area is similar to Mr. Adam's but would call for "staging areas," at both ends of the Big Sur Coast, tourist busing and massive parking garages. A 'few' homes would be purchased.

On January 15, 1980 the Wilderness Society told Congress that, "Fee acquisition of much of the private land in Big Sur is part of our proposal." The 'few' homes statement more recently is just the opening wedge to lull us into inaction.

THREAT NO. 4
The Wilderness Society's plan to ask Congress to consider the Park Service as the 'steward' for the area would virtually ensure the Yosemitization of the Coast under the worst of the two land management agencies.

The Park Service and the Forest Service have both been condemned in the recent General Accounting Office Report for acquiring private land regardless of need, and regardless of impacts on communities.

THREAT NO. 5
The Big Sur Foundation's statement that it is time for the Federal government to "go the last mile" assumes that monies needed to implement the Local Coastal Plan can only come from the federal government.

This assumption is untrue. Funds are available without strings through the Land & Water Conservation Fund, and the State Coastal Commission and perhaps through a Big Sur surcharge on visitor usage of various facilities.

The Friends of the Big Sur Coast believe that our magnificent area has been and is extremely well protected by the natural constraints of the land itself, by the natural restraint of the people who love the land and have chosen to live here, by county zoning and by the rigid controls of the 1976 coastal act . . . all of which absolutely prevent overdevelopment. We do not need further protection . . . our tourists do not need federal regimentation of their enjoyment . . . the federal government does not need to spend more money . . . the Peninsula does not need a staging area and all that it would mean. No matter what guarantees various organizations, individuals or the government promises to provide, we know . . . from the American Indians and other federalized inholders . . . just how well government land promises are kept. The federal beauracracy is a steamroller and has . . . and will . . . run rampant over the rights of residents in federalized areas. The fight to save our life-style will be expensive. Please help by joining the Friends of the Big Sur Coast and sending a contribution.

DOLL'S HEAD. Hollywood, 1936, was the "first image I made after meeting Edward Weston," said photographer Ruth Bernhard. The photograph is included in a collection recently published by The Friends of Photography titled *Collecting Light, the Photographs of Ruth Bernhard.

The photographs of Ruth Bernhard

'Collecting Light' is published

Collecting Light, the Photographs of Ruth Bernhard, a book by James Alinder which contains 35 high quality reproductions of photographs by Bernhard, has been published by The Friends of Photography.

Alinder, a member of The Friends of Photography, a non-profit organization founded in 1967 to actively support creative photography, has written an introductory essay that focuses on the life of the photographer and describes her involvement with the unique photographic qualities of light. The publication also includes a list of plates with comments by the artist.

Born in Berlin, Germany, in 1905, Bernhard studied at the Berlin Academy of Art before moving, in 1927, to New York, where she started her work in photography. Beginning in the 1930s, she supported herself by producing commercial work in both New York and Hollywood. In 1935 she met Carmel photographer Edward Weston and through her association with him came to understand fully photography's potential as an art form.

In 1953 Bernhard moved to San Francisco, where she still lives. She has taught photography at many schools in the Bay Area and has conducted private classes and workshops throughout the country. In 1974 she issued two limited-edition portfolios of her work. This book, which offers a retrospective view of her nearly five decades of work in photography, is her first monograph.

Collecting Light is the 21st in a series of publications issued by The Friends of Photography under the general imprint of Untitled. Publication of this book was supported, in part, by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, a federal agency.

Collecting Light is available only from The Friends of Photography, P.O. Box 239, Carmel, Calif. 93921. Include $1 postage and handling per copy and add 56 cents state tax per copy if a California resident.

Photography workshop slated

The Easter Workshop, a series of creative photography classes led by a faculty of outstanding contemporary photographers, will be conducted March 30-April 3 by The Friends of Photography in Carmel and field locations around the Monterey Peninsula.

The workshop will consist of seminars, critiques, discussions and lectures at Sunset Center, Carmel and field trips at various locations including Point Lobos State Reserve.

Michael Burns, winner of the 1980 National Endowment for the Arts Photographer's Fellowship; Judith Golden, who taught photography at UCLA from 1975-79 and had a portfolio of her photographs included in the 1978 Time-Life Photograph Yearbook; Richard Misrach, who received Photographer's Fellowships from the NEA in 1973 and 1977 and was awarded the Ferguson Grant by The Friends of Photography in 1976; and Olivia Parker, whose portfolio of original prints, Ephemera, was released in 1978, and book Signs of Life published the same year by David Godine.

Registration for the Easter Workshop is now closed. Approximately 60 photographers will participate in the workshop which has become a longstanding tradition of The Friends of Photography. Each student will be assigned to a small group. The groups will meet with faculty members in rotation during morning and afternoon sessions. The entire workshop will meet together for evening sessions of lectures and other activities.

At Hidden Valley

Tickets available for 'La Boheme'

Tickets are now available for the Hidden Valley Opera Ensemble production of Puccini's La Boheme, opening Thursday, April 10 at the Hidden Valley Theatre, Ford and Carmel Valley roads, Carmel Valley. Additional performances are scheduled April 2, 18, 24, 26, May 2, 7, 9, 14 and 16 at 8 p.m. with Sunday matinees April 20, May 4, 11 and 18 at 2:30 p.m. All performances will be sung in English.

Written in 1896, La Boheme is based on the French novel Scenes from the Bohemian Life by Henry Murger. The story focuses on four young artistic Bohemians living in the Latin Quarter of Paris in 1830. Rudolfo, the romantic poet meets Mimi and they fall in love. Although their continual arguing eventually separates them, she returns to him in her final hour, gravely ill.

Written by the same composer who created Tosca, Madama Butterfly and Gianni Schicchi, Puccini's La Boheme is considered to be one of the most popular operas ever written because of its soaring melodies and orchestration.

Admission is $8, adults and $6 for children, 14 and under.

Tickets are available at Countrywide Crafts in The Barnyard and How-to-do Anything Bookstore in Carmel; the Record Cove, Monterey; Lily Walker Records, Pacific Grove and the Hidden Valley Box Office, Carmel Valley or may be reserved by phoning 659-3115.

WE'RE PLAYING A NEW TUNE AT TOOTS LAGOON

BOURBON STREET

The Fabulous Toots Lagoon has a totally new look and a terrific new Creole menu. Our chef put his heart and soul into creating the now famous Seven Course Creole Dinner, served nightly in our new gourmet dining room, Bourbon Street, located at the rear of Toots. Dinners are served from 6 P.M., and include such extraordinary entrees as Prawns Royale, Poisson Papillote, and Boeuf Viuex Carre, and flaming desserts such as Bananas Foster and Strawberries Suzette.

Pirate's Alley

In the front of the restaurant, called Pirate's Alley, we serve breakfast from 8 A.M. (9 A.M. Sunday) and lunch is served from 11:30 to MIDNIGHT. It's by far the best late night menu in Carmel. Songs of praise are being composed about our special platters, and the Toots Burgers whistle their own sweet tune.

AND WE HAVE FRESH OYSTERS!
Every day we feature fresh oysters for only 25¢ apiece during Happy Hour from 4:30 to 6 P.M. Our cocktails and oysters are now as famous as the Boston Pops.

YOU'LL LOVE THE ALL NEW TOOTS LAGOON AND WE BET YOU'LL SAY "HONEY, THEY'RE PLAYING OUR SONG"

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

THERE IS A CURRENT myth that the wine to serve with Chinese food is either Wan Fu from France or Fu Jin from California, both gentle white wines of rather nondescript character. Their role is unobtrusive, adding a certain graciousness to the procession of dishes, conflicting with none, from oysters to pork, shark's fin to chicken.

But there is another answer, and we found it in Chicago, served unostentatiously but wonderfully at a small private dinner in the home of one of our country's most talented gastronomic personalities — Chef Louis Szathmary of The Bakery. He was not the cook on this occasion. The 12-course Chinese dinner, with four appetizers and as many desserts, was prepared by his wife, Sada, for 10 persons.

To the red wine selection that accompanied the dinner in just a moment. First, more about Chef Louis Szathmary. The white-haired, mustachioed, ample-girthed Szathmary is probably the only chef in the world holding a degree in psychology, and whose Escoffier approach to the world of cooking fills a humble bakery shop to capacity five days a week.

THE ATMOSPHERE is eternally festive, with a prix fixe five-course dinner bargain at $17, prepared by Chef Louis himself who does kitchen duty from 7:45 a.m. to midnight every day but Sunday and Monday. On those days, he's just as busy with his writing assignments, a syndicated newspaper column plus a regular culinary feature in Travel-Holiday.

Chef Louis is even more proud of his collection of culinary autograms (a new word for us, too, indicating writings by famous persons about food) which includes those of several American Presidents, their wives, Einstein, Thomas Edison, Ernest Hemingway, Brillat-Savarin and Walt Whitman. With his glasses pushed back into his great mane of white hair, he leds visitors onward to room after room of gastronomic memorabilia, which includes some 10,000 etchings and art works, from Durer to Dali, the subject, food.

AND NOW TO THAT red wine Chef Louis selected to go with the Chinese dinner, Torres Gran Coronas Reserva, from Spain.

The Catalonian wine has a remarkable heritage; the Torres family has been vinting wine in this area for several centuries. The Gran Coronas Black Label Reserva wine is mellow with wood aging but still retains sufficient zing and total acidity to accommodate "the assault on the taste buds" which Chef Louis avers is the fascination of course after course of single Chinese dishes.

There really is no mystery about the harmony of wine an food. Who among us cannot imagine the taste of a brook trou sauteed in butter? To that imaginary concept, try on mentally, a sweet white wine or a bitter red tannic wine. The don't work. Wipe the mental palate clean, and try a light, dry tart and chilled white wine. Perfect.

Such a wine works also for oysters, clams, lobster crabmeat. Moving to a Mousee of Salmon, light, delicate ir flavor, think on a gently dry Zinfandel Rose, mingling on the taste buds most seductively together.

•

THE LATE ZEN SCHOLAR Alan Watts, a true wine lover in his salad days, once topped the requisites of good living with wine and food in these words: "The life of affluence and pleasure requires exact discipline and high imagination." It might seem that there is some dichotomy in those key words, discipline and imagination. In Watts' application, discipline points to the focused mind, and imagination becomes the springboard to expanding delights.

There are no rigid rules about the service of any wine and food, save for the pleasures which the combinations may bring. The everlasting dictum about "red wine with roasts and red meats, white wine with poultry and fish" is good, as far as it goes. But with a little imagination, even that rule can be bent for deeper delight.

Roast chicken becomes a wonderful foil for a fragrant Cabernet Sauvignon, just as we found those wok-stirred Chinese dishes of vegetables, pork, chicken, beef, mushrooms of Sada Szathmary's 12-course feast were enhanced with red, not white, wine.

Chamber orchestra to perform

The Hidden Valley Chamber Orchestra directed by Stewart Robertson will present an evening of orchestral music Friday, March 28 at Sunset Theater, Carmel. The concert begins at 8 p.m.

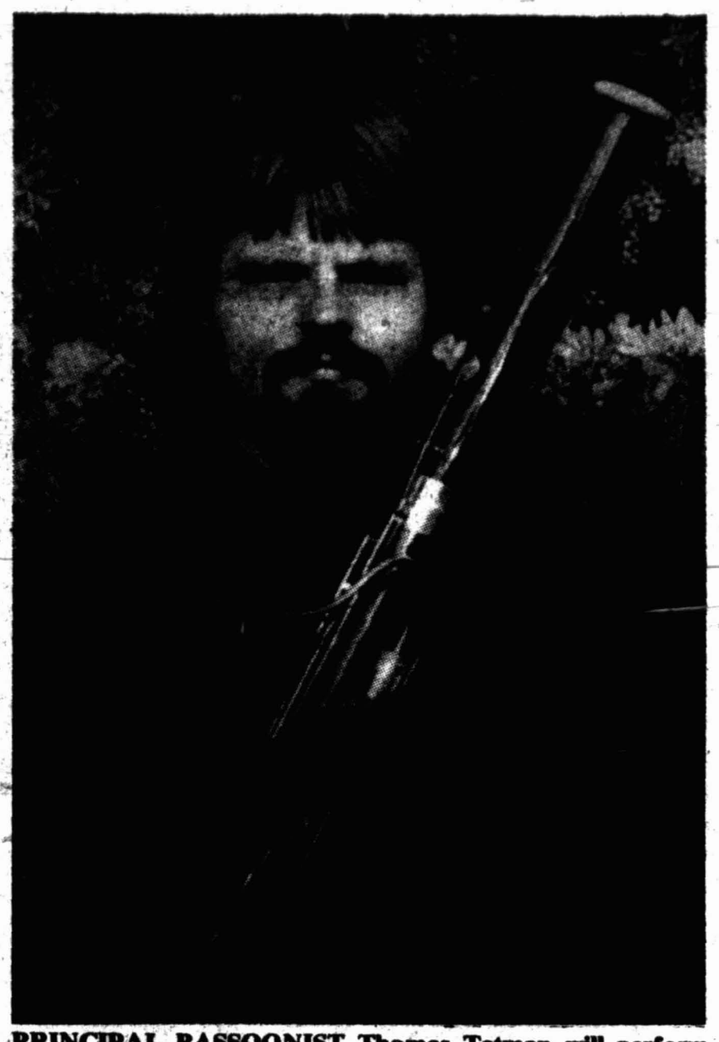

Thomas Tatman, principal bassoonist for the orchestra, will perform the Bassoon Concerto by Carl Maria von Weber. The 30-piece chamber orchestra will also present Symphony in C Major and The Wasps, an overture by Vaughan Williams.

Tatman, who has played the bassoon since the age of 10, attended Western Illinois University, where he was a student of Dr. Robert Koper, bassoonist of the Camerata Quintet. In 1975, Tatman was appointed principal bassoonist of the 6th U.S. Army Headquarter's Band in San Francisco. He also continued his professional studies with Stephen Paulson, principal bassoonist of the San Francisco Symphony.

Upon his discharge from the Army, Tatman joined the Hidden Valley Chamber Orchestra as co-principal bassoonist. He is also principal of the Monterey County Symphony.

PRINCIPAL BASSOONIST Thomas Tatman will perform the Bassoon Concerto by Carl Maria von Weber at a concert of orchestral music to be presented by the Hidden Valley Chamber Orchestra Friday, March 28 at Sunset Theater, Carmel.

Musical ensemble at Barnyard

Members of the Hidden Valley Musical Theatre and Opera ensembles will present selections from their current productions Saturday, March 29 in the center courtyard of The Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel. The public is welcome to attend the free, hour-long program which begins at 2 p.m.

Songs from Carousel by Rodgers and Hammerstein, Mozart's tragicomic masterpiece, Don Giovanni, and A Cabaret, a revue of five decades of American musical theatre, will be performed.

The program is sponsored by The Barnyard Merchants' Association.

Sierra Club schedules Sunday hike

A leisurely hike through Carmel Woods and Pebble Beach is on the outing calendar Sunday, March 30 of the local Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club.

Everyone is welcome to meet at Carmel Woods School, Dolores and First, at 9:30 a.m. for a walk through the north end of Carmel to the beach. Strollers will continue up Pescadero Canyon to the Macomber estate and return to Woods School for lunch at the end of the excursion.

After lunch, those who would like a full day's hike, may take a car shuttle to another location.

For more information, phone 624-6650 or 372-2449.

Breadmaking at Peppercorn

Recipes for traditional Easter breads of foreign lands will be prepared Sunday, March 30 at the Cooks' Club demonstration at the Peppercorn in The Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel.

Everyone is welcome to attend the free program from 10 a.m.-noon and 1-3 p.m.

For additional information, phone 625-0100.

NCGA golfers play at Spyglass Hill

The 75th season of the Northern California Golf Association will tee off Thursday and Friday, March 27-28 with the NCGA Bay Area Zone Tournament at the Spyglass Hill Golf Course, Pebble Beach. Spectators are welcome to observe the play at no charge; 35 four-man teams will begin from the first and 10th tees at 8 a.m. each day.

The NCGA is divided into seven zones. Each club may be represented in its respective zone by a four-man team, and players play at 80 percent of their current individual handicaps. The top three teams in each Zone will return to Spyglass on Sept. 11-12 to determine Zone champions.

All top three Bay Area teams from the 1979 tournament will return for the season's first NCGA tournament. Mc Laren Park Golf Club fired a record 54 on its second day to win the Zone 60-54-114 followed by the Oakmont Golf Club and the California Club tied at 122. Mc Laren Park is sending two of the four members from last year's winning team, Joe Michelucci and Frank Acosta. They will be joined by two newcomers, Jules Michelucci and Joe Alvarez.

Though there is no charge to gallery the event, the $4-per-car gate fee into Del Monte Forest will be in effect.

Roundup

The California Department of Forestry stated today that this year because of accelerated grass growth, a 30-foot clearance free of flammable vegetation could save your home from a wildland fire. Due to the anticipated fire season, the department asks residents of Monterey County's wildland areas to begin their annual fire prevention measures by clearing grass or other flammable vegetation away from structures. Residents may phone the department at 649-2920 for additional information.

22nd annual race

Bird Rock Steeplechase event this Saturday

Scarlet-coated riders astride powerful horses will meet the challenge of the Bird Rock Steeplechase Course when they compete in the 22nd annual Pebble Beach-Los Altos Hunt Race Saturday, March 29 in Pebble Beach. Situated aong the imcomparably beautiful 17-Mile drive, the Bird Rock Course will host more than 60 riders from throughout California.

The correct term for the scarlet hunt jackets is "pink." They are worn only by accredited members of a recognized hunt; other riders wear black jackets with beige breeches and black hunting boots.

The four-mile Hill Topper Point to Point, to be ridden by pairs in hunting attire and limited to members and guests of visiting hunts, is the first event at noon. The Del Monte Forest Point to Point, the second race, limited to qualified hunters, covers four miles of terrain and includes 10 fences on the steeplechase course.

The Signal Hill race, due to begin at 1:15 p.m., is run over a flat course and is limited to junior riders 17 years of age or younger.

The Pace Setter is the fourth race scheduled to begin at 2:30 p.m., while another race, to be ridden by ladies in formal hunting attire, will start at 2:45 p.m. at the Bird Rock Steeplechase. The two-mile course has jumps not to exceed three and one-half feet in height.

Comic relief is provided by the Shetland Pony Race, which matches equestrian skill against pony power. The green grass of the one-sixteenth mile course creates an additional rider hazard as the little beasts are more likely to grab a bite than gallop toward the finish line.

The run for the Del Monte Gold cup completes the day with an event called the Spyglass Hill race, scheduled at 3:30 p.m. The race, open to all horses four years of age and older, is limited to male riders and covers a half-mile timber course.

A buffet luncheon catered by The Lodge at Pebble Beach will benefit the United States Equestrian Team. Luncheon will be served from noon in the gaily striped Race Meet enclosure which permits a full view of the course. Tickets are $30 per person. They may be reserved through Mrs. Gretchen Hill at 624-0207.

Spectators who do not attend the luncheon may simply park their cars along the 17-Mile Drive or Bird Rock parking area. There is no charge, but the $4-per-car gate fee into Del Monte Forest will be in effect.

For further information, phone 624-2756.

Five hunt clubs from throughout the West will parade their hound packs at the Hound Show on Sunday, March 30 at Collins Polo Field, Pebble Beach at 10 a.m. Everyone is welcome to attend the competition at no charge.

Presented under the auspices of the Santa Inez Valley Hunt, the competition will include packs of 12 dogs from the Los Altos Hunt and West Hills hunt clubs that are part of the Pacific District of the Master of the Fox Hounds Association of America.

Hunting dogs that compete in classes for fox hounds, bassetts and beagles as well as fox hunting terriers will be judged for their ability to conform to the pack, awareness and ability to make a good hunting dog.

Judge for the Hound Show will be Sherman Haight Jr., master of the Litchfield County Hounds of Connecticut and president of the Masters of Fox Hounds Association of America.

A no-host picnic box lunch will be served; tickets are $5 per person. They may be reserv[illegible] by phoning Mrs. Dale [illegible]n at 625-1396.

Although there is no charge to attend, the $4-per-car gate fee into Del Monte Forest will be in effect.

All Saints' School plans supper

An evening of musical theater preceded by wine and a buffet supper is planned Saturday, May 10 by All Saints' Day School Parents' Organization to benefit the school's scholarship fund.

Carousel, Rodgers and Hammerstein's beloved musical, will be staged by the Hidden Valley Musical Theatre Ensemble at the Hidden Valley Theatre, Carmel Valley.

In addition, etchings and lithographs by California artist Harold Mason will be displayed.

The cost is $20 per person. For more information, phone 624-9171.

Donald Worth exhibit opens at Carmel Foundation

A one-man show of paintings by Donald Worth, named Carmel Foundation Artist of the Month, will open Tuesday, April 1 at the Foundation gallery, Lincoln and Eighth, Carmel.

An artist's reception to mark the opening is scheduled Tuesday in the Seidenick Room from 2-3 p.m. Everyone is welcome to meet the artist.

Worth has created a series of abstract acrylics and collages, using the classical approach to composition, under the guidance of artist and Carmel Foundation teacher, Molla Archer Moss. Previous works by Worth, including seascapes, mountain scenes and Western landscapes have appeared in group shows. While a member of the Oregon Society of Artists, he studied under Ed Quigley. His mountain scenes were inspired by his climbing experiences in California, Colorado and the Pacific Northwest.

The exhibit may be viewed through April 30 from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 2-5 p.m. on weekends.

For more information, phone 624-1588.

Trivia tourney benefit April 1

Who was the youngest actor ever to win an Academy Award? What was the name of Roy Rogers' dog? Can you name the Seven Dwarfs?

Trivia is the subject when KRML Radio (1410 AM) presents the first Monterey Peninsula Trivia Tournament on Tuesday, April 1 at the Casa Maria Restaurant, located at Cannery Row and Hoffman Street, Monterey. The fun begins at 8:30 p.m.

Ten teams representing Monterey Peninsula businesses will compete for the trivia title. A trophy will be awarded to the first place team.

Proceeds will benefit the March of Dimes.

Wildflower hike at Garland Park

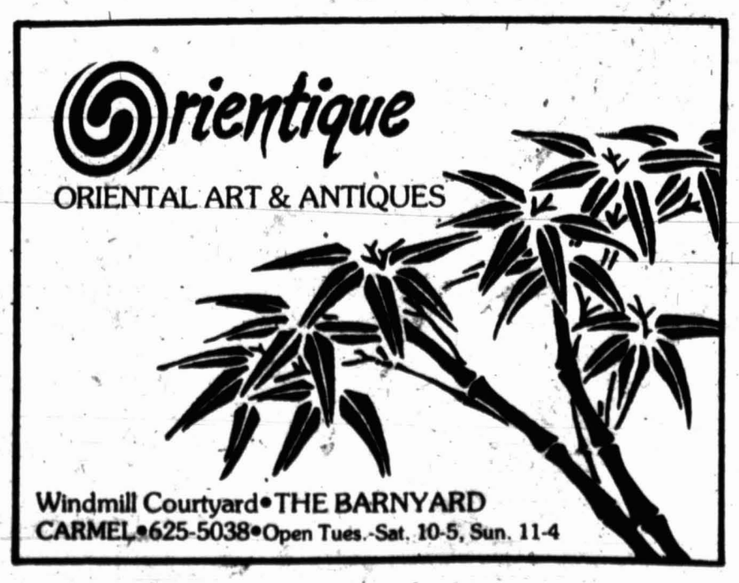

Two leisurely hikes through Garland Ranch Regional Park in Carmel Valley are planned Saturday, March 29 by the local chapter of the California Native Plant Society.

The morning walk will begin at 8:30 a.m. at the park visitor center located nine miles east of Highway 1 on Carmel Valley Rd. Wildflowers and other plants will be identified on the moderately paced four-mile stroll.

A beginners' afternoon walk is also planned. Approximately 15-20 common and showy wildflowers in bloom will be identified on the two-mile hike. Group size is limited to 20; phone 646-0515 for the starting time and to sign up.

The Fourth Annual Young California Artist Competition, a statewide contest between top instrumentalists, singers and pianists, will be presented by the Carmel Music Society Saturday, March 29 at Sunset Theater, Carmel. Final auditions will continue from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. as the 12 finalists perform 25-minute programs. The grand prize winner and selected finalists will appear at the Awards Concert at 8 p.m. Everyone is welcome to attend the concert auditions at no charge.

The panel of judges who will jury the finalists is composed of Gary L. Beswick, violinist and member of the Hartnell College music faculty; Roy Bogas, pianist, prize winner at the Second International Tschaikowsky Piano Competition in Moscow; Corinne Swall, coloratura soprano, artistic director of the Mother Lode Musical Theatre, concert singer and faculty member at the University of California, Berkeley; and Kyung-Soo Won, music director and conductor of the Stockton Symphony Orchestra.

The grand prize winner will receive a $1,000 cash award and a contract to appear the following year on the Carmel Music Society's subscription series as a Young California Artist for a fee of $1,000. Lesser cash prizes will be awarded at the discretion of the judges.

Preliminary auditions were conducted by a screening committee of professional musicians by listening to tapes and selecting the top candidates for the final auditions. The committee selects up to but not more than 12 finalists with no more than four from any category.

For more information, phone the Carmel Music Society at 624-2085 or Lynwood Bronson, chairman of the Competition Committee at 625-0797.

One-Act Play Festival at MPC

Seven one-act plays will be presented by drama students from seven high schools on Friday, March 28 at the third annual One-Act Play Festival to be staged at the Monterey Peninsula College Theatre, Monterey. The festival, sponsored by the MPC Drama Department, will continue from 10 a.m.-10 p.m.

The high schools that will participate are: Carmel Experimental Theatre, Aria Da Capo; Seaside, The Valiant; York School, Albert's Bridge; Monterey, The Lottery; North County, Waiting for the Bus; Santa Catalina, Lemonade; and Salinas, Games/Stages.

THE FOREST THEATER GUILD announced this week its ninth annual Summer Festival to be held July 3 to August 31 on the outdoor stage of the Forest Theater. William Shakespeare's Hamlet, directed by Peter B. Magee, will play in repertory with Tom Stoppard's Rosenkrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead, directed by Peter DeBono.

Peter B. Magee, a native of Carmel, received a bachelor of science degree in theater arts and continued graduate studies at Southern Illinois University. He appeared at the Joseph Papp Theater and Cubiculo Theater in New York City. He was assistant stage manager for the National Ballet fall tour, an actor with various East Coast dinner theaters, and technical director of Group 5 Productions of Alexandria, Va.

Locally, he has directed Play It Again, Sam for both the Naval Postgraduate School Theater and the Studio Theater; The Comedy of Errors and Romeo and Juliet for the Forest Theater Guild; Absurd Person Singular for the Studio Theater; and Norman, Is That You? for the Wharf Theater.

For the past three years, he has been acting and directing in Seattle. Some of his recent directorial credits include That Championship Season in which he also acted, and A Christmas Carol in 1979 at Monterey Peninsula College; The Sunshine Boys at the Wharf Theater in 1979; La Pastorella — Christmas Morality Play this past December for the city of Monterey at the Conference Center.

He also directed the winner of the initial Carmel Festival of First Playwrighting Competition, Scenes and Revelations in 1978 at Sunset Theater in Carmel.

Auditions will be conducted for major roles in both plays Saturday, March 29 and Sunday, March 30 from 1-4 p.m. at the outdoor Forest Theater, Mountain View and Santa Rita avenues, Carmel. All roles are open. Further auditions to complete casting are scheduled the first weekend in May. Everyone interested in technical and backstage work is also invited.

ERICK HAWKINS is both pioneer and patriarch in the world of American modern dance. Present at the budding and a factor in the flowering of the schools of both Martha Graham and George Balanchine, he has developed his sources into an idiom of movement as individual as a signature and as mysteriously significant as the stars.

In fact, Hawkins' performance has much of the same spellbound and imponderable allure as the night sky or the desert at sunrise. This affinity with the primordial and elemental is evident in most of his work, but it acquires particular fascination when his sources are mythic for then the sense of ritual evoked makes one remember that the origins of theater are sacred.

Though effusions are elicited by Hawkins, do not expect them in his work. For him essentials are a feast at which his frugality manages to include something increasingly rare on the international dance scenes — live music. In these times when tapes are evermore heard, his characteristically straightforward statement, "You must have live musicians or you have dead music and dead theater," is especially welcome.

The Erick Hawkins Dance Company with orchestra will appear for the Carmel Festival of Dance series Sunday, April 13 in Sunset Theater at 8 p.m. They are not a large group — including Hawkins, there are nine dancers — but they are enough; and they bring a superlative dividend of eight live musicians.

Of the works performed, all choreographed by Hawkins but ranging widely in contemporary music, perhaps the most unique will be Plains Daybreak. Set to a score by Alan Hovhaness, stunningly costumed by Ralph Lee, Plains Daybreak distills the essence of Hawkins' rapt esthetic in a pristine ceremony of creation. We are among the first things — animals and man at the dawn of creation. What gives irresistible appeal to Plains Daybreak are the extraordinary headdresses dsigned by Ralph Lee. All the cultural affinity and understanding of American Indians for animals seems expressed in them. The quivering needles of the porcupine even add to the musical dimension for Hovhaness echoes their subdued rattle in his score.

Wit and an ironic view of Americana are brightly displayed in Parson Weems and the Cherry Tree which also will be presented in this performance. Here, the legend of George Washington is gently and merrily spoofed. The true account of the chopping down of the cherry tree has come to light and is here presented to a commissioned score by Virgil Thomson. It is a hilarious and wonderful tale.

Erick Hawkins is an American dance original; over several very productive decades, he has caused revolutions in dance. He has been called "one of the most individual and inventive choreographers of our time" and "undisputably one of the major artistic voices of this generation." He is famous for his collaboration with many of the very best American composers, painters, and sucIptors, and always performs with live music — in this case, a chamber orchestra.

The Erick Hawkins Dance Company is one of the half dozen very finest in American modern dance and we hope you will join us for an evening with this extraordinary artist. Tickets at $6.75 and $5.75 are still available on a reserved basis. They may be reserved by calling the director's office at Sunset Centre, 624-3996.

Choral society out of tune with symphony concert at King Hall

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

IN THESE LAST DAYS before Proposition 9 neatly divides state revenues it may still be possible to petition Governor Brown to declare the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society a disaster area.

With the resultant low-interest loans it may be possible to convert the society to a semi-professional organization that is reasonably capable of complementing the Monterey County Symphony with singing that is in tune, in rhythm and at least mildly expressive.

These seeming minimal requirements were barely met in the King Hall concert by the Symphony last Sunday, and, at that, only in the Gloria by Poulenc.

In the Chichester Psalms by Leonard Bernstein the Choral Society reduced that sacred West Side Story to a shambles, meeting almost no entrance on time, singing almost constantly out of tune and, thereby, producing a pathetic requiem instead of the joyous and colorful utterance the composer intended.

CONSIDERING THE RHYTHMIC and tonal complexities of the piece one can only wonder at Maestro Haymo Taeuber's decision to include it in this only collaboration of choir and orchestra this season. Of course, that decision was made long before Taeuber knew what the Choral Society's capabilities would be this year. For that matter it must be said that the able-eared among the choir struggled mightily against the philistines in their midst to transcend the murk.

In the Gloria the women generally held up their part of the bargain, while the men sang as though they had been rounded up off the street just before the concert. To make matters worse there was an insufficient number of male voices and the consequent transparency resembled broken glass.

On the other hand was soprano Louise Pearl who was soloist in the Poulenc and who opened the evening with arias by Wagner. Following the Tristan prelude in which Taeuber eschewed a deeply atmospheric mood in favor of a more lean and bright treatment, Miss Pearl sang the celebrated Love-Death from that opera. The voice was strong, clear and obviously experienced and the mental state of the delirious Isolde was portrayed with sensitivity and dramatic phrasing.

In the Wesendonck Songs, also by Wagner, Miss Pearl's vigorous and flavorful singing was only less than ideal because of a breezy perfunctoriness that kept the music light. Otherwise the orchestra sounded fine and it was indeed a pleasure to hear some Wagner for a change.

IN THE GLORIA MISS PEARL met the exposed ascending arpeggios with ease, grace, and a point of style that gave purpose to the choral society's efforts.

Except for vagaries of rhythm in the Bernstein (especially in the percussion) the orchestra sounded well and Taeuber's direction was straightforward if, again in the Bernstein, a bit ponderous.

The next Monterey County Symphony concerts are in early May. Eugene Istomin will be soloist in the Tchaikovsky concerto and the orchestra will do the Brahms Symphony No. 1.

LAST SATURDAY THE Paul Kuentz Chamber Orchestra of Paris played baroque, rococo and 20th century music for the Monterey Peninsula Concert Association. The dozen musicians offered bright and tasty playing to a large audience at Pacific Grove Middle School auditorium and iced the cake with three concerti, two for piccolo trumpet and one for violin.

Jean-Francois Dion was the young and masterful trumpeter (a student of Maurice Andre) who gracefully negotiated the frighteningly high tesitura of the Sonata for Trumpet and Strings by Purcell and, later, the Telemann Concerto in D. Backstage Dion immediately admitted the difficulty of the instrument and its music, but his playing was robust and fearless.

The solo violin was played by Monique Frasca-Colombier (Mme. Kuentz) in the Concerto No. 1 in C by Haydn. Compared with the Mozart concerti this piece is smaller of scale and less dramatic. Miss Frasca-Colombier played with exceptional accuracy and full if monochromatic tone. The adagio movement was lovely with the solo sweetly sung to a pizzicato accompaniment.

The contemporary pieces were Barber's Adagio for Strings, led by Kuentz at a brisk and nervous clip, and The Arrow of Time for strings by Andre Jolivet, a prolific composer who often makes use of Schoenberg's dodecaphonic method. This work has something of that and is richly scored (as for 12 soloists) and makes rhythmic adventures that suggest timid jazz. The playing was excellent and the dedication obvious.

THE CONCERT OPENED with Concert de symphonies in B Minor, Op. 4, No. 3 by Dauvergne, a French rococo type who sparked his works with drama and theatrics. The work also revealed some strangely unexpected harmonies in the slow movement. The piece and its playing were refreshing, though not likely to start a run on Dauvergne.

At intermission Maestro Kuentz visited the lobby to sell copies of six or seven albums he has made, two of them in collaboration with harpist Nicanor Zabaleta.

DR. VAHE ASLANIAN will conduct the Hartnell Community Chorus and Orchestra in a performance of Antonin Dvorak's poignant choral work Stabat Mater. Soloists Caterina Micieli, Vicky Van Dewark, Daniel Parkerson and John Miller will join the chorus and orchestra in concerts Saturday and Sunday, March 29-30, respectively, at the Hartnell Performing Arts Theatre, Salinas and Old Mission San Juan Bautista.

Hartnell Chorus and Orchestra to perform

The Hartnell Community Chorus and Orchestra joined by soloists of international acclaim will present the poignant choral work Stabat Mater by Antonin Dvorak Saturday and Sunday, March 29-30. Conducted by Dr. Vahe Aslanian, the identical program will be performed Saturday at the Hartnell Performing Arts Theatre, 156 Homestead Road, Salinas at 8 p.m.; the Sunday concert begins at 4 p.m. at the Old Mission Church of San Juan Bautista, located 26 miles north of Monterey on Highway 101.

Soloists who will join the chorus are soprano Caterina Micieli, alto Vicky Van Dewark, tenor Daniel Parkerson and bass John Miller.

The choral work was written by Dvorak after a double tragedy occurred in his family — the death of an 11-month-old daughter and the death of his only son just one month later. The tragedies inspired the devout man to compose one of his noblest religious works, which reflects the sorrow of the mother standing at the foot of the cross.

Caterina Micieli has sung with the Hollywood Bowl Symphony, Los Angeles Philharmonic and the Carmel Bach Festival. Her repertoire includes nine operas, all the major Bach works, and the Requiems of Mozart, Brahms and Faure.

Vicky Van Dewark recently returned to the San Francisco Bay Area after a year of study and coaching in Budapest, Hungary at the Liszt Academy of Music. Dewark has sung operatic roles and oratorios with the California Bach Society, University of California and Donald Pippin's Pocket Opera.

Dr. Daniel Parkerson has previously appeared with the chorus and the Monterey County Symphony. In addition to two seasons with the Western Opera Theatre, he has also performed as tenor soloist with the San Francisco Civic Chorale, San Francisco Boys Chorus and the California Bach Society. He has a doctorate in music from the University of Arizona.

John Miller has performed for four seasons with the San Francisco Opera where he was a finalist in the 1971 auditions of the Merola Opera Program. As a West Coast regional finalist in the Metropolitan Opera Auditions, he was heard in a special broadcast of Beethoven's Missa Solemnis.

Audubon Society national conference at Asilomar

Challenge of the 80s: Energy and Natural Systems is the theme of the 1980 Western Regional Conference of the National Audubon Society that will continue Saturday through Tuesday, March 29-April 1 at the Asilomar Conference Grounds, Pacific Grove.

Against a background of ongoing energy and conservation displays, the conference will focus on the important natural values of America's Great Basin and the critical role of energy as an environmental issue today.

The conference will convene Saturday with a keynote address by Russell Peterson, president of the National Audubon Society. As one of the country's leading environmental spokesmen, he will define energy problems and chart Audubon's course on energy and environmental action for the 1980s.

The 1980 conference program will also include:

- An introduction to the ecology of the Great Basin with presentations on the area's geologic origins, ecological character and wildlife resources. Stretching from the Sierra Nevada and Cascade mountain ranges eastward across Oregon, Nevada, Idaho and Utah to the Rocky Mountains, the Great Basin is high, cold desert country. The federal government is proposing massive Western coal development in the region.
- Major addresses will be presented on the relationships between energy and natural systems, and the role energy conservation and solar development will have to help solve the current energy crisis.
- An afternoon-long energy fair is planned stressing practical aspects of energy conservation and solar energy applications.
- Field trips are scheduled to view key wildlife areas of the Monterey Peninsula including Point Lobos State Reserve, Elkhorn Slough and the 17-Mile Drive. In addition, birding expert Rich Stallcup will lead a pelagic excursion to sample the birdlife off the Monterey coast.

The registration fee, good for admission to all programs except field trips, is $10. Participants may register at the administration building beginning at noon Saturday. Members of the local chapter of the Audubon Society will man a hospitality table where participants may obtain information about the area and the conference.

Accommodations are also available at the Asilomar Conference Grounds. Rates range from $68 per person for three nights lodging and all meals to $126 per person deluxe housing, private bath plus meals.

TRUSTEE AND AUTHOR TURN TO RANCHING

Two good Carmel families, the Gottfrieds and the Mastens, are to quit the village shortly. With the blood of the pioneers running in their veins, they are headed north into the wilderness of southern Oregon, there to raise alfalfa and sheep on a 340-acre ranch.

Some time ago the Gottfrieds and the Mastens bought the farm together. The exodus, it is understood, begins early next month. In time the two families will make a habit of returning to Carmel to spend the winters.

Mrs. Gottfried has been a Carmelite since the days of little-girlhood. Lee Gottfried, whose term on the City Council ends next month, has lived here 10 years. The Mastens' term of residence has been three years.

Dick Masten is the author of Saint Udo, Hildreth Masten is a well-known dancer. Gottfried is a building contractor. Both families have been active in the Abalone League.

RAMPAGING CAR LANDS IN SHOP

Carmel being built the way she is, it is not unusual for an automobile to leave its moorings on Ocean Avenue and go meandering off toward the beach.

Heretofore such wandering cars have usually ended their dashes for freedom when they caved in their radiators against some tree trunk. But a long, sleek car bearing a Hollywood emblem varied the established procedure last Saturday when it bumped into an Ocean Avenue establishment and knocked exactly $22.25 worth of value out of a special chair on sale at the front door.

Assurances were made at the time by the owner of the car, who quickly arrived on the scene of disaster, that full restitution would be made. But at the time of writing, four days late, the chair is still smashed, the bill unpaid, the automobile gone and the owner unknown.

CARMEL AND THE HIGH SCHOOL BAND

Today is election day for trustees of the Monterey Union High School District. There are three candidates, with two positions to fill. It is very likely that Carmel's candidate will be defeated at the polls.

Which means that for another term of two years, Carmel will not have representation on that most important board. With a registered vote larger than all the rest of the distict except Monterey itself; with an assessed valuation of nearly one-third that of the entire district; with a high percentage of the pupils of the school, boys and girls ranking high in class work, athletics and school activities; with a citizenship that is intensely interested in education, the Sunset district, which includes Carmel, is voiceless on the high school governing board.

Carmel asks its place on the Board of Education of the Monterey Union High School District. If it comes today, through the ballot box, we thank you. If it does not, we ask it of you in courtesy and justice.

CITY GRATEFUL TO FAW FOR HELP IN FREEWAY THREAT

Claude Faw will receive a letter from the Carmel City Council today expressing the feelings of a grateful community for his effort and skill in advertising what Carmelites regarded as a major threat to their way of life, a freeway paralleling the city's beautiful eastern boundary and curving through one of its most attractive residence areas.

It was largely through Faw's assembling material and presentation of Carmel's case at a public hearing before the highway commission here last month, and his appearance in behalf of the city at the meetng of the commission in Sacramento last week that the commission agreed to abandon the proposed freeway along Highway 1 and adopt a freeway routing through Hatton Canyon.

THE NEEDLER BY BETH

"As long as you' re the Needler, why don't you really needle someone?" I was asked. "Who, for instance?" "The Street Department, for instance," was the reply.

This person has two beefs against our esteemed department. One is that whenever a holiday week or weekend looms, the street department immediately rushes out to tear up streets, blocking off others and creating a traffic hazard in our already crowded village. His particular example this week is the work being done up around Sixth and Junipero.

The other beef or rather suggestion is why the painting of white lines and other such simple jobs cannot be done at night, as it is in other places, instead of a time when traffic is heavy. Our reply to him was to take the matter up with Bill Askew, who is the street superintendent. He is a very reasonable and efficient person, and no doubt can explain the entire set-up.

DOES CARMEL NEED A NEW GAS STATION?

Jackson Smith, an employee of the General Store presented a petition to the commission. The petition contained more than 600 signatures in opposition to the building of a service station.

The General Store, said Smith, sells natural foods. The store is worthy of remaining because it is a valuable contribution to the Carmel community.

Additional opposition was raised by members of the audience. One gas station opponent said that Junipero is a bottleneck. With the increased flow of traffic, the street would have to be widened to accommodate the traffic and trees would have to be cut down in the process.

The fate of the General Store and the surrounding structures will be decided April 15.

DOBRY IS NEW EDITOR AND PUBLISHER OF THE PINE CONE

The ownership of the Carmel Pine Cone changed hands effective April 1. George M. Dobry of Carmel Valley purchased the newspaper from the Post Road Publishing Co. of Lafayette, which has operated it since last August.

Dobry will serve as both editor and publisher. Charles Strosnider continues in his position of sales manager and Al Eisner is now managing editor, as well as assisting in advertising sales.

Architects and graphic designers meet at Conference Center

The first annual Monterey/Carmel Design Conference titled California 101 will draw more than 350 participants, including architects, graphic designers and other professionals interested in architectural design, Thursday through Sunday, March 27-30. Presentations will be at the Monterey Conference Center, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey, each day.

Sponsored by the California Council, the American Institute of Architects, the conference is intended to be a three-day dialogue of architects and designers from 13 Western states who will focus on design directions. Guest speakers will be 101 California architects selected for the diversity of their design philosophy and for professional excellence.

Conference chairman Edgar L. Huxley, AIA, San Diego, said, "while our goal is to emphasize the design activity in the Western states, California, with its international design reputation, is the focus of the conference."

The conference will offer a forum for discussions that include multi-media team presentations and case studies which will emphasize concepts of solar and energy-conscious design, historic and adaptive re-use of buildings, design involving extensive citizen and community input and design of environments for people with special needs.

Special presentations include an opening night panel discussion on California design directions by Michael Pittas, director of the Design Arts Program of the National Endowment for the Arts.

A multi-media tribute will be made to Herbert Bayer, now a California painter, environmental designer and architect. Bayer, a master at the Bauhaus, and currently a consultant to ARCO, is responsible for ARCO's corporate identity.

Among the 101 architects who will also participate are David C. Martin, AIA; Judith Crutcher, AIA; John Louis Field, FAIA; John V. Mutlow, AIA; Leason F. Pomeroy III, AIA; Douglas Stenhouse, Peter Vandine, Ron Yeo, FAIA; Thomas R. Vreeland Jr., AIA; Goodwin B. Steinberg, AIA; and Helmut Schulitz.

More than 4,880 members comprise CCAIA, making it the largest state organization of architects — more than twice the size of the next largest, Texas, which has 2,000 members.

California 101 is part of a year-long public communications program, Architecture California: Form and Substance, adopted by CCAIA which the organization hopes will inform the public about what architects do and the contributions of architects and architecture.

For more information, phone Jim Hommes, AIA, of Will Shaw and Associates, at 649-3013.

A collection of Sosaku hanga or contemporary Japanese prints on loan from the New York University Grey Art Gallery will be displayed April 1-30 at the Marjorie Evans Gallery, Sunset Center, Carmel.

The word hanga defines a movement and describes an attitude adopted by Japanese artists prior to World War II. The hanga movement rejected the techniques of the woodblock artists of the ukiyo-e school, a style that focuses on the floating or transitory world. With the end of Japan's isolationism in the mid-1800s, the influence of Western art began to make an impact and the ukiyo-e art form began to decline in popularity.

Hanga woodblock artists who supported themselves illustrating magazines and newspapers discovered that reputable artists in the West made prints and engravings by cutting and printing their own work.

To a Japanese society where the labor boundaries were carefully defined, the idea that an artist did manual labor was unacceptable. Yet few artists were enthralled by the Western attitude and labeled the art of producing a print single-handedly sosaku hanga or creative print.

But the art form was not accepted by the Japanese. It was the American soldiers and tourists who purchased the prints that sustained the art form and still does so today although the hanga artists have now gained acceptance in Tokyo and Kyoto.

For more information, phone 624-3996.

Handicapped art exhibit

An exhibit of works by local handicapped artists who are members of Handicapped Activities Unlimited of Pacific Grove will open Tuesday, April 1 at the Seaside City Hall Gallery, 440 Harcourt Ave., Seaside.

Artists from the Monterey Peninsula include Carmelites Sharlotte Broudy and Stephanie Hancox, painting; Pacific Grove residents Chad Hammack, painting and George Menasci Jr., painting and sculpture, Gary White, sculpture, and Marian Fitch, textile.

The works may be viewed through April 30 from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. weekdays.

WOVEN IN THE LAST half of the 18th century, this classic Saltillo sarape was created by the inhabitants of the state of Coahuila, located more than 600 miles north of Mexico City. An exhibit titled the Saltillo Sarape will open Saturday, March 29 at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, 559 Pacific St., Monterey.

The Saltillo Sarape, an exhibit of Mexican, Rio Grande and Navajo weavings from the 18th and 19th centuries, will open Saturday, March 29 at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, 559 Pacific St., Monterey.

Part of the traveling exhibition from the Santa Barbara Museum of Art, the blankets are known by the generic term Saltillo for a town in the present state of Coahuila (668 miles north of Mexico City). However, not all were produced in Saltillo. Many were woven in areas scattered throughout the mining communities, cattle and sheep ranches and vast agricultural fields of Northern Mexico.

In style, design, texture and color the sarape relates to the pre-Columbian inhabitants of Mesoamerica. As a garment it had a number of uses for the society that utilized it. As a textile art form, the Saltillo sarape was developed and used by the residents of northern and western Mexico in the late 17th, 18th and 19th centuries, with a decline in the early 20th century.

The sarapes will be exhibited through May 4 in the Main Gallery. Hours are 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and 1-4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Backgammon

by Alfred Sheinwold

SAVE THE GAMMON

You, White, roll 5-3 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it?

You are tempted to close your board with the five and take only the three with the blot on Black's bar point.

You must plan to get that blot into your home board and then take one man out of Black's board as soon as possible thereafter. If you get a shot at Black, one man on his 1-point is almost as good as two; and your home board will be good enough with just five points made.

If you don't get a shot at Black very soon you must get ready to get out of his board altogether in order to save the gammon. Using this full roll to run may make the difference between losing a single game and being gammoned.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send 50 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

A tribute to Harry Downie

By the REV. LARRY FARRELL

A tribute to Harry Downie delivered at the March 12 meeting of the Carmel Rotary Club

Tomorrow morning March 13, 1980, Harry Downie, a great Carmelite will be laid to rest at the Mission of San Carlos del Rio Carmelo where he has labored these past 49 years with such skill and dedication rebuilding the Mission from years of neglect and ruin.

Harry was a Renaissance man. Self-educated, he was a craftsman and artist, an architect, engineer and a collector of outstanding library of California. He was consulted by historians, archaeologists and anthropologists. He became a legend in his own time.

Every mission and historic building in California felt directly or indirectly the touch of his genious. Carmel, however, was the recipient of his greatest interest, talent and love. The Carmel Basilica is his lasting memorial and if Harry is listening, and I feel sure he is, I can hear him say, "Knock off the flattery Larry, lay off the malarkey. I'm busy checking into some disputed details of Carmel Mission history with Padres Serra, Crespi and Lasuen. I've already checked out St. Peter's Gate and inspected all the archangel's mansions."

Thank you, Harry, for being our friend — for being you. Carmel will miss you but never forget you.

OBITUARIES

Admiral Riebe dies at 83

Memorial services were conducted Sunday for Rear Adm. H. Paul Riebe (ret.), a dental officer with the U.S. Navy and instructor for the University of California School of Dentistry for much of his life.

He died Thursday afternoon, March 20, when he was stricken at the Fort Ord swimming pool. He was 83.

Adm. Riebe was commissioned in the Naval Dental Corps in 1926 after graduating from the UC School of Dentistry in San Francisco, and spent the next 31 years in the Dental Corps.

He served at naval hospitals in the U.S. and the Far East, including supervision of facilities at the Alameda Naval Air Station in Oakland and as Fleet Dental Officer at Pearl Harbor.

Adm. Riebe established the dental facility at what is now the Naval Postgraduate School between 1948-51. He last served as Inspector General for dental facilities and services with the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery in Washington, D.C.

He joined the University of California faculty when he retired from the Navy, and worked there until statutory retirement in 1964.

Adm. Riebe was named Dentist of the Century by the University of California Dental Alumni in 1977, and was honored at the 1960 annual meeting of the alumni association.

He is survived by his wife, Dorothy Riebe of Carmel; two sons, Herbert of Walnut Creek and John of South Lake Tahoe, and four grandchildren.

Memorial services were conducted at the Protestant Chapel of the Naval Postgraduate School. Cremation followed at the Little Chapel by the Sea in Pacific Grove, with the Paul Mortuary in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests that any memorials be sent to the scholarship fund of the University of California School of Dentistry, Fourth and Parnassus, San Francisco, or to the Navy Relief Society, 108 N. Randolph St., Arlington, Va. 22203.

MARGARET BENNETT

Memorial services were conducted Sunday for Margaret Elaine Bennett, a retired psychologist who died Monday, March 17 at Carmel Valley Manor after a brief illness.

Born in Milford, Mich., Miss Bennett had lived on the Peninsula since 1968.

Educated at Stanford University, she received an A.B. degree in 1918, M.A. degree in 1919 and Ph.D degree in psychological education in 1937.

She taught at Berkeley High School for several years and was director of guidance and psychology for the Pasadena school system for nearly 30 years.

Miss Bennett spent many summers as guest lecturer at various universities, including Columbia, Santa Clara, Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

After World War II, she worked with the U.S. State Department in Germany in a program for social vocational rehabilitation of women.

Twice president of the National Vocational Guidance Association, she also was a 50-year member of Altrusa International, a founder of the Monterey Peninsula YWCA and a member of the Carmel Presbyterian Church.

Memorial services were conducted as part of the vespers Sunday at Carmel Valley Manor. Inurnment followed at the family plot at Milford. The Farlinger Funeral Home was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests that memorial contributions be made to the Carmel Presbyterian Church or the YWCA of the Monterey Peninsula, 276 Eldorado St., Monterey, 93940.

FREE WANT ADS

For subscribers to the Carmel Pine Cone

A SPECIAL OFFER TO OUR VALUED SUBSCRIBERS

The Pine Cone is happy to be here and we always look forward to meeting our subscribers. As a gesture of our thanks for your continued support, we invite you to have a FREE WANT AD every week, in your paper.

HOW TO WRITE A WANT AD

List the classification you want your ad to appear under in the form at right. Then start your ad with the item you have for sale, etc. Be sure to include your phone number at the end. To make your ad effective, describe your item fully including such things as weight, size, color, age, condition, etc. It is best to list your asking price; this will eliminate calls from people who are not prospective buyers.

RULES:

Free want ads are for person-to-person sales only. Ads for businesses or real estate will not be accepted. Free ads must be written on this form only and delivered to our office by 3 p.m. Monday (no phone ads, please). Free ads are limited to 16 words. The Pine Cone is not responsible for errors in free ads. Limit is one ad per subscriber per week. To run the same ad the following week, a new ad on a new form must be submitted. Publisher reserves the right to refuse any free ad for any reason. Free ads must be placed in the following classifications: Antiques, Autos for Sale, Boats for Sale, Lost & Found, Misc. for Sale, Pets & Livestock, Special Notices, Wanted, Yard Sales.

This label is your ticket for a free ad and must appear here on any ad you turn in. Clip this label from the front page of your weekly Pine Cone.

DELIGHTFUL NEW HOME FINANCING AVAILABLE
Located on an oak-studded lot within walking distance to downtown Carmel, this attractive new split-level home has three bedrooms, 2½ baths, dining room, gourmet kitchen with breakfast area and a large high-ceilinged living room with a view of Point Lobos. Quality construction with top-grade materials and tasteful decoration make this home a "must see" at $325,000. With a substantial down payment, the owners will consider carrying the balance at 12% interest.

RELAX IN PRIVACY
In this two-bedroom, two-bath home, just five blocks from the Carmel Post Office. Stunning living and dining room, cheerfully decorated kitchen and breakfast room, and a den with wetbar. Off the master bedroom on a protected fenced deck is a hot tub. The lot is 60x100 and there's a double garage. Price just reduced to $229,500.

CARMEL VALLEY POST ADOBE
The owners of this attractive three-bedroom, two-bath post adobe home have bought another home and are ready to move. There is a separate dining room, large family room with hobby space and an oversized garage. In order to speed up their move, the owners have reduced the price from $169,500 to $162,500. Drive by 81 Poppy Road and call us to inspect.

CARMEL HIGHLANDS SERENITY
On an acre looking out to the sea through stately pines, this four-bedroom, 4½-bath home offers tranquility, beauty and comfort. The living room is almost 16x26 and it has a high trestled ceiling and a dramatic stone and brick fireplace. Lots of deck area and a glassed-in spa-recreation room with dressing room and a half bath. This is a very special house and several of my competitors have told me they feel it is the most interesting and best-priced house in the area. $450,000.

Monte Verde Chalet

Squirrels play in the gnarly oak that fronts this house on Monte Verde. Flowers are everywhere: in tubs, pots and beds beneath the oak; in window boxes, planters and jardinieres across the front, on the elevated deck, and along the screened patios that skirt the sides.

The house will remind you of snow country. Its entrance is up a flight of stairs and just off a broad, sunny deck. The living room, with windows west and south, is 22 x 13, crowned by a heavy beamed cathedral ceiling, warmed by a charming brick fireplace midway along the south wall.

At its east end, you step into a cozy den. It's paneled in knotty pine stained a lime color, one wall is lined with shelves — a very pleasant retreat. The north wall of the living room is wide open, giving on a 12 x 10 dining room which has access through sliding doors to the spacious front deck.

The kitchen, naturally, is just behind the dining room. It's a sizeable, well organized space with vinyl floors, mahogany stained cabinets, mahogany colored appliances and gleaming white counters. A side door leads out to a small side porch.

At the rear, the kitchen opens to an irregular shaped corridor which takes you back to the two large bedrooms and 2 baths. These areas are all carpeted and warmly lighted by sliding doors from both bedrooms. The baths are tastefully papered, one has a stall shower, and the other has both tub and shower.

There's an abundance of closets throughout the house and storage galore in the space beneath it. All in all, a very comfortable, livable residence on one of Carmel's most desirable streets. Look for it just south of 13th, on the east side. It's not far from the Mission, an easy walk down to Carmel Beach, about a mile south of Ocean Avenue. Just 12 years old and in mint condition. $239,500.

A TAX SHELTER IS GREAT

BUT THAT'S not the only reason to buy this fine property in Sky Ranch Estates. First of all, you've got a handsome new three-bedroom home with many, many luxury features such as teak parquet floors, corner stone fireplace, big family room, and spacious deck. Then there's a separate one-bedroom guest house with its own kitchenette and deck, as well as an oversized detached garage. All this on 10 acres of land dotted with gorgeous oaks . . . plus superb views of sky, mountains and valleys. Now for the tax shelter . . . a buyer might want to look into the possibility of a tree farm, orchard or vineyard . . . renting either of the houses for depreciation benefits and income . . . and taking a tax credit for a solar hot water heater. The owner is prepared to be VERY flexible on terms. See it and submit your offer! $365,000.

STYLE

AND ELEGANCE are high on your list, yet you want views and privacy. Here's a marvelous three-bedroom home in Baronet Estates with YOUR name on it. Located just off Laureles Grade, this fine home sits high atop a 1½-acre site adjoining 12 acres of greenbelt — and that means your privacy will be undisturbed. You'll find much to admire in this multi-level home, such as tall ceilings, tall windows, great views, two fireplaces (and handsome ones, too), and dining room on a balcony. Moreover, there's room for a swimming pool. An excellent buy at $275,00, and the owner will help you finance. Call us for an appointment!

BUILDING SITES

IN CARMEL are not overly plentiful these days but we've got a dandy on a wooded level lot south of Ocean Avenue offering a very easy walk to town. It's priced at $130,000 — but don't go away. The seller will carry at 1 per cent below the current rate AND he'll also subordinate. How can you miss? Call us for location and details.

YOU'VE ALWAYS WANTED

TO HAVE YOUR OWN charmer right in Carmel, right? How about this one on an oversized lot south of Ocean Avenue, offering a level three-block walk to the village. Stone fireplace, beamed ceilings and hardwood floors feature the living room. Then see the two bedrooms, two tiled baths and cute kitchen with tile counters. One of the bedrooms has a separate entrance and could be a rental. Now for the best part: since it's an oversized lot you could add on to the main house, or build a guest house. All right, let's get cracking! $205,000.

WE HAVE BUYERS

FOR GOOD QUALITY, well located two-and-twos (that's two bedrooms, two baths) in Carmel. They've told us they'll pay up to $250,000 for such homes. Maybe you own this kind of a house and have been thinking of selling. Let us tell you about tax deferrals and such. You might be pleasantly surprised!

CARMEL

Secluded by hedges on a very large site extending to forested greenbelt in back, this Hatton Fields shake-roofed, stucco and wood home faced with old brick in front has great charm as well as privacy.

Outdoor enjoyment centers about a sheltered deck with steps to a lawn bordered by a lovely oak, a holly tree, camellia bushes and high hedge beyond which is space for a guest house on cleared land. Other aspects of this attractive property include a gracious entry, custom carpeting throughout the delightfully decorated and meticulously maintained interior, double garage with laundry facility, wall of storage closets and electric door opener.

Carmel schools to bar students who are not immunized

Richard Hawkins, director of pupil personnel services, says that all students under the age of 18 are required to be immunized against diptheria, pertussis, tetanus, polio and measles.

Free immunization clinics offered by the Monterey County Health Department will be available Tuesday and Thursday evenings, March 25 to April 7 at the county offices on Aguajito Road in Monterey.

Hawkins told the Board of Education at its March 11 meeting that the district had not completed an audit of student immunization as required by federal law. The deadline for the complete audit of all grade levels was November 1979.

The federal requirement stems from an immunization law passed by Congress in 1977, Hawkins notes in a memorandum to the trustees. Joseph Califano, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, set a national goal of 90 percent complete immunization for all students.

"We requested immunization information from parents at Carmel Middle School and the high school," Hawkins said. Letters were sent to parents in the spring of 1979, but the response to the letters was not significant, he noted.

Hawkins said in December 1979 that the district increased its effort at Middle School and the high school to inform parents of the need for verification of immunization.

"We had announcements in school newsletters, and we sent letters to every family of students who were either not completely immunized or those on whom we had no information."

"We hired part-time clerical help to facilitate the management of records and the communications with parents and students," Hawkins added. "Our school secretaries have shouldered a heavy burden with the program."

In its current status, which will not meet federal requirements, the audit shows that 76 percent of the students have been immunized, Hawkins notes in his memorandum. The audit indicates that of the 2,400 students enrolled in grades K-11, 1,830 have been immunized. There are 570 students, however, who have either failed to submit documentation or who have not been fully immunized.

"It is incumbent upon the district to have all students fully immunized," Hawkins said. The exclusion date has been scheduled because the "considerable effort and expense put forth in the past year and a half" has not met with complete success, he said.

April 7 was selected because it is the day after spring vacation. Hawkins said that all students not fully immunized will be informed by letter before March 28.

Up to five days of absence will be allowed for the student to complete his immunization, Hawkins said. "The district will lose no revenue during those five days," he noted. Income for the district is based on average daily student attendance.

"In some cases two-to-three boosters are all that's needed to bring a student up to date," Hawkins said.

He noted that parents are entitled by law to sign a waiver for "personal beliefs" to make their children exempt from the immunization law. He added that the district is not encouraging this, as it could result in these children being pulled from school during the outbreak of disease.
